TROY GIRL'S ROMANCE

MARRIAGE VOWS UNITE THEM.

Miss Mabel T. Gray of Troy, Becomes the Bride of Melvin L. Wooster of Elmira—Wedding Is the Culmination of a Pretty Romance.

Cupid, the God of Love and Fate the maker of destinies have played another game, and as a sequel a quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday evening, March 30, at the home of Mrs. Evangeline Gray, on Canton street, in Troy, when her eldest daughter, Mabel T., was united in marriage to Melvin T. Wooster of Elmira, in the presence of the immediate families of the contracting parties, the Rev. E. P. Morse officiating.

After the ceremony an excellent wedding dinner was served by Miss Jennie Nelson, the popular cateress.

Courtship Tinged With Romance.

The marriage was the happy culmination of a pretty little romance that dates back a few years when the parties were taking a trip through Watkins Glen one warm sunny day in October, little dreaming what the day would bring forth. While strolling along one of the narrow paths that skirt the edge of the many deep pools of that locality, Miss Mabel, in some unaccountable way, lost her footing, slipped under the guard rail and suddenly found herself submerged in water some eight or ten feet deep. Here was a situation to try the nerve of the most courageous. Her companion, however, proved himself equal to the occasion. As soon as he became aware of what had happened and realizing the necessity for prompt action, he planted himself as firmly as possible on an overhanging rock, reaching out a strong arm, to the drowning girl, as she rose to the surface which she caught with a death grasp, at equal risk to himself he succeeded in bringing her to the shore in safety.

It is needless to say the trip through the Glen was postponed for that day, and returning to the hotel, a few articles of clothing kindly loaned by the inmates enabled her to make herself presentable enough to take the first train for Elmira, where she reached the home of her friends there in a much dilapidated condition.

The sequel is soon told—the young man, it seems, had long cherished a secret admiration for his companion, which this incident only served to strengthen. While with her the "hero of the Glen" had found a place in her heart, which all arguments from her many fututre admirers failed to dislodge and thus the affair has terminated after the most approved style of the modern romance.

The bridegroom is a young man of sterling worth, a trusted employe of the railroad company for years, while the bride is one of Troy's most estimable young ladies, whose rare qualities of head and heart have endeared her to a large circle of friends. A graduate of the Troy High school and later of the Mansfield Normal, she has been a teacher in the Troy graded school, also the graded schools of DuBois, Pa.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts from admiring friends by whom she will be greatly missed, as she leaves soon for her new home in Elmira, where she will be at home to her friends at No. 44½ West Second street, after May 15.

Sayre Boy Killed.

Lyle Sheddon, the 16 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sheddon, of Sayre, was killed at Campbell, N. Y., about noon Saturday. He boarded a D., L. and W. freight train at Elmira, and as the train was passing through Campbell he attempted to alight therefrom. In so doing he was thrown under the train, both legs cut off just below the hips, and his head was badly crushed. The accident was discovered almost immediately and he was picked up, but lived only a few minutes.

Fortune Smiles on Sayre Man.

By the death of Jacob Grunindike, who made an immense fortune during the days of the development of the California gold mines, Louis E. Newland of Sayre, will probably receive $100,000. A brother, Frederick Newland, and a sister, Miss Jessie of Elmira, will also receive a similar sum. Mr. Grunindike was a cousin of Mr. Newland's father and being unmarried, the Sayre man and his brother have been found to be the neaarest relatives.

Died in Hospital.

Without revealing a clue as to the whereabouts of either friends or relatives, James Carey, who was injured under the wheels of a Lehigh freight train at Laceyville early Friday morning, died late Sunday afternoon at the Robert Packer hospital.

LOVE AND INTRIGUE.

Sad Story Brought to Light in Standing Stone Township.

SOME DOINGS IN THE COURTS.

Burley Westbrook of Standing Stone Township Committed to Jail on Serious Charge — Alleged Forger Held to Court—Injunction Dissolved

By the arrest and committing to jail on Saturday of Burley Westbrook, a well known young man of Standing Stone township, a sad case is brought to light. It is the same old, yet ever new story of love, intrigue and jealosy. Westbrook is charged by Lincoln Kinner with illicit relations with his wife, Lily Kinner. He was arrested in Standing Stone township on Saturday on a warrant issued by 'Squire Meredith, and was brought to Towanda, where he was arraigned Saturday afternoon. The justice held the defendant under $800 bond in default of which he was committed to jail to await a hearing next Thursday.

Pathetic, indeed, was the scene in 'Squire Meredith's court Saturday, when the arraignment of Westbrook took place, and sad, indeed, is the state of affairs which were brought to light. According to the stories told in the justice's office, Mrs. Kinner is the mother of two children. The family was not in very good circumstances and their lot not being a happy one, she left her husband and went to work to support herself, the children remaining with the father. Young Westbrook kept company with her so it is alleged, and the husband, becoming aware of the fact, swort out a warrant charging the young man with a serious offense. After the defendant had been committed to jail, Kinner, the husband of the woman in the case, and also the plaintiff, asked his wife to go back home with him and start life all over again, if only for the children's sake.

Millard Plead Not Guilty.

John Millard of New Albany, accused of forging a check at Laquin, was arraigned before 'Squire Meredith on Saturday, pleaded not guilty to the charge, waived a hearing and was returned to jail in default of bail.

Italian Held to Court.

Pellegrini DaDerri, the Italian who was arrested at Cold Springs for assault and battery on a little girl, was arraigned before 'Squire Meredith Saturday, and was held to court. Bail not being furnished, he was returned to jail.

Injunction Dissolved.

Judge Fanning on Saturday returned a rule in the case of the First National bank of Sayre, vs. F. W. G. Bartlett, the jewelry merchant, who recently went into bankruptcy, dissolving the temporary injunction which restrained the sheriff from executing an issue on the defendant's property. Mr. Bartlett went into bankruptcy, and in accordance with the act which allows $300 exemption, he claimed and was allowed that amount. The First National bank of Sayre, levied on the property claimed under exemption, and the injunction was granted to restrain the sheriff from proceeding on the execution. The dissolving of the restraining order, has led Mr. Bartlett's attorneys, Hoyt, Schrier and Maynard to appeal the case to the superior court. Judge Dunham of Sayre, represents the bank.

Grade Crossing to Be Abandoned.

State Highway Commissioner Hunter of Harrisburg, in company with D. J. Macafee, who has the contract to build the state road from Athens to Milan, and N. F. Walker, the resident engineer, have gone over the proposed route and examined the grade crossing at Morley's Mills, as to the feasibility of abandoning it and substituting a subway further down the track. The chances are that the dangerous grade crossing will be abandoned.

Will Hear Appeals.

The board of county commissioners, accompanied by Clerk F. R. Mitten, start out today to visit the various boroughs and townships in the county for the purpose of hearing appeals from taxpayers. The work will keep the commissioners busy until the early part of May.

Rummerfield Lady Injured.

Mrs. P. C. Angle, a very estimable Rummerfield lady, suffered a dislocation of the hip joint by a fall at her home Sunday night. She arose at midnight to turn the drafts off the stove, and in some manner fell, sustaining the dislocation.

Subpoenas in Divorce.

Two more subpoenas in divorce have been awarded to the following parties: Lilley Bell Hatch vs. Fred Hatch; Hannah M. Teeter vs. James Teeter.

COUNTY PROHIBITION PARTY GIVEN NEW LIFE

Enthusiasm Ran High in Tuesday's Convention.

STRAIGHT PROHIBITION IS TO BE THE ISSUE

Woman Suffrage, Initiative and Referendum and Other Planks are Not Wanted in the Platform Acording to the Sentiment Which Prevailed.

During a two-hour session in the grand jury room of the court house Tuesday afternoon, the Prohibition party of Bradford county, took on new life, shook off old yokes, as it were, and laid the foundation for a strenuous campaign against the liquor traffic. In addition to that, officers were chosen for ensuing year, ten delegates were chosen to the state convention, a candidate for the office of county surveyor was nominated and money was raised to commence work with. If the sense of the convention of Tuesday is carried into the state gathering and made to prevail, the platform will belong to the Prohibitionists of Bradford county.

It was Rev. W. S. H. Herrmans of Towanda, the Prohibition candidate for congress last Fall, who fired the first gun for the new straight-policy defined in one simple word, "Prohibition." During the meeting, which was presided over by W. E. Steckles of Sayre, as temporary chairman, Mr. Heermans addressed the 25 or more members of the convention, and made a ringing, eloquent plea for a straight out and out prohibition platform. He pointed out the uselessness of trying to overcome the liquor evil by local option, and urged that the woman suffrage, the initiative and the referendum, and every so-called reform movement which has been dumped onto the prohibition platform be cleared off and let the power of the issue which is great enough in itself to stand out from under the shadow Where the voter can see it in its own plain magnitude. Mr. Herrmans went on to say that every kind of a reform movement had been placed on the prohibition platform and thousands of voters would not support the cause on that account for in doing so they would endorse a lot of pious nonsense that loaded the real and the greatest issue in American politics down so heavily that the load could not be carried. His speech rang with earnestness, and took the convention by storm, the sense of which was heartily in favor with his ideas.

W. H. Hickok of East Troy, who declared he had voted the prohibition ticket for and since St. John, and would always vote it if no one else did, made a plea for woman suffrage, stating that if the women could vote, the cause of prohibition would win in a walk.

The committee on resolutions of which Rev. Herrmans was the chairman, submitted the following which was adopted by the convention:

The Resolutions.

We, the Prohibitionists of Bradford county, in convention at Towanda, on April 9, 1907, are glad to affirm that we believe in the prohibition of the liquor traffic, which is rather the undoing of the frightful national policy of legalizing. We appeal to the citizenship of the state and nation to give attention to this matter. The liquor traffic is already prohibited. It is not the right of national or state citizenship to sell liquor. It can only be done by citizens who are legalized by license or tax methods. The issue does not need any other to make it the greatest question that American politics have ever had. The business is on the increase in this country of ours. Until this policy is changed, all religious reforms or law enforcing efforts are futile and as inoperative as to undertake to dam the Mississippi river at its mouth. The situation is serious and increasingly so. By statistics, the output is increasing and every man, woman and child in the United States and its possessions must consume 30 gallons or more on the average annually. It is no wonder that crime and insanity are on the increase. There is only one way in American policies to change a fixed policy. The citizens must act together in the use of ballots, which is the proper use of a party. We ask all who would not personally sell liquor to use this only way to do what they want done. The success of the church and every effort to better private and public life can not be with a policy that legalizes and so permits the liquor traffic.

Officers Chosen.

Chairman—E. H. Meeker, of East Smithfield.

Vice-chairman—Benjamin F. Sutton, of Sayre.

Secretary—Ernest Steckle, of Sayre.

Treasurer—J. E. Pierce, of Milan.

Delegates to the State Convention.

Ten delegates were chosen to attend the State convention, and the following gentlemen were those selected: B. F. Sutton, Sayre; G. J. Jelliff, Sayre; Grant Swayzer, Sayre; W. H. Hickok, East Troy; W. E. Steckles, Sayre; H. D. Angell, Sayre; J. E. Rumsey, Sayre; William Keeler, Milan; W. J. Munn, Sayre; William Ellsworth, Wyalusing. Every one of the above named delegates signified their intention of attending the convention.

Candidate for County Surveyor.

Just before adjournment, the name of T. A. Seward of Athens, was placed in nomination for the office of county surveyor, and it will be on the ballots to be voted at the June primaries.

Adjournment was taken after one of the most enthusiastic and largest attended prohibition conventions held in Bradford county in a long time.

THREE FREE SCHOLARSHIPS.

Offered Bradford County by Philadelphia School for Nurses.

The Philadelphia school for nurses has purchased large properties at 2219-25 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, and will extend the benefits of the free course in nursing to young women of every rural community and of the smaller towns and cities throughout the entire country. The course is two years, but may be shortened to 18 months by six months' reading and study at home. The school provides room, board, nurse uniforms, gives full instruction and pays the students's fare home at the end of the course. A special short course is provided for those who cannot spend two years in the study but who wish to quckly prepare themselves for self-support. The object of those who are providing the funds for this work is to ultimately extend the benefits of skilled nursing to every village and township in the land. Nearly 200 free scholarships will be available his year.

In accordance with the above provision, three free scholarships in the two years' course have been assigned to Bradford county. A class is forming to begin on April 30, 1907. Applicants must be over 18 years of age and adapted to the profession of nursing. The young women readers of this paper who desire to avail themselves of this opening should communicate with the school at once by letter.

PNEUMONIA PROVES FATAL.

Sullivan County Baby Who Swallowed Quarter Is Dead.

Leo Hughes, two years old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Roberts, of Sullivan county, died early Saturday morning at the Robert A. Packer hospital, of double pneumonia. On March 25 the little chap swallowed a quarter which he had found in the pocket of a neighbor who usually brought him candy. The child after taking the coin went into an adjoining room and was alone when he placed it in his mouth. Hearing a choking sound the mother went in and it was then the neighbor discovered the loss of the coin.

The accident took place at the home of the boy's parents in Murry, Sullivan county and the little fellow was taken to the Packer hospital for treatment. A week ago the parents decided to have an X-ray examination at Elmira and it was on this journey that the child contracted a cold which settled in his lungs bringing on the trouble which caused his death. Examinations failed to reveal the lodging place of the coin and it was not until it was found embedded in the tissues in the neck in such a manner that the instruments passed over the swelling about it without finding it.

The remains were taken to Milured Saturday and the funeral was held on Sunday.

CUT HIS THROAT WITH A RAZOR.

Patrick Barrington of South Waverly, Committed Suicide Wednesday.

Patrick O. Barrington committed suicide Wednesday morning about 6 o'clock. Mr. Barrington is an old resident of South Waverly and for the last few years has been employed as gate tender at the Fulton street crossing of the D. L. and W. railroad. He lost his position a short time ago and has been rather despondent ever since, but his family have thought nothing of it as he had been in such moods before.

Mr. Barrington was always an early riser and Wednesday morning shortly after 5 o'clock he arose as usual and went out to one of the outhouses back of the house. He did not come in to breakfast after being called several times. An investigation was made and he was found on the floor of the shed with his throat cut.

He is survived by his wife and four children; two boys and two girls all living at home.

The Dead Came to Life.

Mrs. George E. Sweet, formerly of Waverly, submitted to a serious operation a few days ago in the city hospital in Corning. She did did not apparently rally from the shock and Thursday the hospital physicians pronounced her dead. An undertaker removed her to her home where the family physician observed traces of life and by the application of restoratives she regained consciousness. It is said that her chances for recovery are good.

Will Resume Publication.

The insurance of the Valley Record office at Sayre, has been adjusted and arrangements are being perfected to resume publication some time this week. The machinery has to be taken down and thoroughly cleaned and rebuilt and broken parts replaced. The building will be rebuilt at once and enlarged giving more room in the mechanical department of the plant.

JAIL WITHOUT PRISONERS.

Regulation of Liquor Traffic Works Reform in Tioga County.

The Tioga county jail at Wellsboro, has lacked a prisoner, a condition of affairs almost without precedent. Even the oldest inhabitant does not recall nor does the jail record reveal a similar state of affairs as far back as traced. During the last sheriff's administration there was one day, Dec. 11, 1905, when the bastile was entirely emptied and ex-Sheriff Joseph H. Ferris recalls that there was one day during his administration that it was empty for a day, but to Sheriff Hatfield, the present incumbent, is the honor of two days only awarded. The criminal court business of the court is dwindling to petty cases, largely assault and battery the result of neighborhood quarrels.

In a measure the strict regulation of the liquor traffic has lessened the amount of crime in Tioga county. Only 38 licenses were granted this year, being about one license to every 1345 persons.

WAS WRITING A BOOK.

Hon. Galusha A. Grow's "Recollections to Be Published.

Mr. DuBois, for the past 20 years, has been a very warm and an intimate friend of Mr. Grow, and, in addition to settling up his estate, will have charge of the editing and printing of Mr. Grow's "Recollections of His Public Life," on which Mr. Grow was at work at the time of his death, and which will prove a valuable contribution to the history of the times to which they relate.

Silas Compton in Michigan.

Silas Compton has been placed in the jail at Stony Forks, Michigan, and according to a paper received from there declares himself well treated by the constable and district attorney in whose charge he went. Compton in a deposition made after reaching Michigan states that he never knew the man whom he is accused of murdering and had never seen him. The officers are now confronted by the fact that the witnesses in the case who gave the most accurate testimony 15 years ago are now scattered so widely that it may be difficult to locate them. This, it is believed, will add to the difficulty of convicting Compton, who says he is absolutely innocent of the crime. The case will probaly be tried next month.

Of Interest to Veterans.

Governor Stuart has signed the bill directing county comimssioners to appropriate annually not more than $100 to each Grand Army Post in their respective counties to aid in defraying the expenses of Memorial day. The bill becomes a law at once, and the G. A. R. posts in this county will therefore be entitled to an appropriation from the county treasury for the observance of the coming Memorial day.

CONTINUED ILL LUCK FROM NEARBY PLACES

MILL BURNED LAST SPRING.

Flames Originating from a Defective Chimney Reduced Home and Contents to Ashes—Mr. Swackhammer Laid Up With Injuries.

The home of Evan Swackhammer, at Homets Ferry, was destroyed by fire at 9:30 Sunday morning. The flames originated from a defective chimney flue, and burned with such fury that it was impossible to save the contents of the house, and practically everything was consumed by the blaze. The loss is placed between $1,200 and $1,500, with no insurance.

Followed by Misfortune.

Mr. Swackhammer is a victim of unfortunate circumstances, and if man is subject to the caprices of misfortune, he certainly has been. Last Spring his sawmill at Homets Ferry was totally destroyed by fire since which time he has been running a mill near Tunkhannock. Last week Mr. Swackhammer met with an accident in which he received a broken rib and other injuries, which have since confined him to his bed at his boarding house in Wyoming county. His wife had been caring for him and only returned to the family home at Homets Ferry Saturday evening. The burning of the home together with all its contents, is a hard blow to the unfortunate family.

Fire at Sayre.

Two large barns located on the Phillip Crans farms, just outside of the Sayre borough limits, were totally destroyed by fire Saturday night about 11 o'clock. The dwelling house on the farm caught but no great damage was done. F. C. Tilliman, the Sayre ice dealer, was a large loser by the fire. He had two steam pumps stored in one of the barns as well as a large number of new farm implements. He carried no insuroance on them, and his loss will probably be in the neighborhood of $1,000.

Carbondale Gets Conference.

The next meeting of the Wyoming conference will be held at the First M. E. church at Carbondale. The Centenary church at Binghamton and Carbondale were contestants for the honor of entertaining the conference and Carbondale won by 74 against 72 votes.

Reception at Ulster.

Prof. John J Cummings gave a reception to his Ulster dancing class in Alliger's hall Monday evening. The affair was largely attended and greatly enjoyed. Supper was served at the VanDyke house.

In ten years Tioga county has reduced her bonded indebtedness from $165,000 to $35,000, and according to its last auditors' report the county's assets exceed the liabilities by $158,389.

William L. Mitchell and Miss Marie Angeline Barilia were married on Tuesday evening by the Rev. G. W. S. Wendrick, pastor of the Presbyterian church, at the home of the groom's father in Troy street, Canton

A young lady, Miss Mary Champluver, employed in the Packer House at Tunkhanonck, is said to have recently become an heir to one-fourth of an estate valued at from $300,000 to $500,000, which was left her by an uncle in France.

Some strange things occur in connection with "Uncle Sam's" postal arrangements. A few days ago a Montrose man received a paper that was mailed to him in Greenfield, Mass., in September, 1884. The paper was 22½ years on the way.

James Damon of Sayre, a Lehigh engineer, is suffering from a severe attack of blood poisoning in his right arm, caused by the teeth of a human being. The injury was received in a friendly scuffle between Damon and some other railroad men.

A large chimney on the Canton High school building collapsed Sunday morning tearing away a large portion of the roof and carrying with it a section of the second story. Had the accident occurred during the school session there is no doubt but what from 50 to 75 lives would have been lost and many injured. The building will be repaired at once.

The Ideal Family Laxative.

Is one that can be used by the entire family, young and old, weak and strong, without any danger of harmful effects. It should have properties which insure the same dose, always having the same effect, otherwise the quantity will have to be increased and finally lose its effect altogether. These properties can be found in that old family remedy, Brandreth's Pills, because its ingredients are of the purest herbal extracts, and every pill is kept for three years before being sold, which allows them to mellow. We do not believe there is a laxative on the market that is so carefully made.

Brandreth's Pills are the same fine laxative tonic pill your grandparents used. They have been in use for over a century and are sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar-coated.

The Public Will Benefit.

H. Sattler's Entire Clothing Stock Thrown on the Market Ordered to be Sold by the Philadelphia Wholesale Merchants' Association.

The public of Towanda and Bradford county will benefit greatly by the tremendous sacrifice sale of consisting of Men's, Boy's and Children's Clothing, Hats and Furnishing Goods, whose entire stock has been ordered placed on sale and converted into cash immediately, and is now in the hands of The Philadelphia Wholesale Merchants' association for immediate sale and quick disposition. A representative of The Philadelphia Wholesale Merchants' Association said that they propose to sell the Sattler stock out quickly, at prices less than actual wholesale cost of production. This will, indeed be a SACRIFICE SALE of Men's Clothing, Furnishing Goods and such as the public of Towanda and Bradford County never had before, or will ever have again. The Whole sale Merchants' Association of Philadelphia say that they will not move a dollar's worth of goods away from Towanda and that at the prices the entire stock will be sold at, it will all be disposed of inside of TEN DAYS' TIME. It will be a Sacrifice Sale, such as the public only have an opportunity to attend about once in a lifetime, and the people of Towanda and Bradford County will no doubt take advantage of this great sacrifice to secure for themselves Clothing and Furnishings at about 35 cents on the dollar. The Wholesale Merchants' Association of Philadelphia inform us that they have engaged 25 extra salespeople in order to serve the vast crowds who will attend this Sale. We bespeak for this Sacrifice Sale of the Sattler Stock a most gigantic business, as Mr. H. Sattler has never carried any except only the most reliable quality of Men's Clothing and Furnishing Goods. This Sale will no doubt attract thousands of people to Towanda, as the people know when they are getting big bargains, and the public are always ready to save one-half on their purchases whenever that opportunity presents itself, and this certainly is the time for our people to secure Men's Clothing and Furnishing Goods at about one-half actual wholesale cost. Think what this great Sacrifice Sale of the Sattler Clothing and Furnishing Goods stock means to you right in the height of the spring season when you need wearing apparel the most.

H. Sattler's Entire Clothing Stock,

Sale Starts Saturday Morning, April 13,

At 9 O'clock.

Let all who possibly can take advantage of this tremendous Sacrifice Sale, and secure their share of the many great bargains that will be offered. At the prices we understand the stock will be sold at, we expect this stock of Clothing and Men's Furnishings to melt away quickly like a snowfall before a July sun. Remember the opening day of this Clothing Business Sale of H. Sattler's Stock, opening Saturday Morning, April 13, at 9 o'clock. It will be a colossal event, and we would advise early morning trading, in order so as to facilitate the serving of the immense crowds of people that will attend this closing out sale. A word to the wise should be sufficient, and we advise you to be on hand early, and benefit accordingly. If you value money, you surely won't miss this sale. LOOK FOR THE BIG SIGN. H Sattler's Clothing Stock now in the hands of the Wholesale Merchants' Association of Philadelphia.

ORDERED FALSE TEETH BY MAIL

Having Set of Teeth Made by Writing—Minersville Resident Arrested for Putting Live Mouse in Easter Egg.

A Hatboro dentist was not long ago in receipt of an extraordinary order from a man in Johnsville desirous of providing himself with a set of false teeth to replace those lost by reason of a kick from a mule. "My mouth," wrote the Johnsville man to the dentist, "is three and a quarter inches across, five-eighths inches through the jaw. It is shaped like a horseshoe, toe forward. If you want any more particulars I'll have to come to Hatboro." He had to make the journey, says The Hatboro Journal.

A deposit of copper has been found in the mountains within 25 miles of Chambersburg, says The Franklin Repository. Several residents of the Franklin county seat are interested in the discovery and samples have been sent to State College to be assayed. If the ore proves rich enough to be worth mining a company will be formed at once in Chambersburg to operate the mine.

A live mouse in an Easter egg led to a warrant being issued for two Minersville residents Monday. The egg was cleverly scooped out and while Michael Dorwig was examining it the mouse scampered out and ran down the inside of his trousers. Dorwig bellowed with fright and, incensed at the laughter of friends, brought suit for malicious mischief.

Thomas Jeffries, 39 years old, a prominent member of the Fayette county bar, killed himself, after having first fired two shots at his wife, neither of which took effect. Mrs. Jeffries owes her life to the fact that the bullets, which were fired from a 32-calibre revolver had not sufficient force to penetrate the folds of a silk gown. When shooting himself, however, Jeffries pressed the muzzle against his temple.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union has indorsed the action of Judge Staples of Stroudsburg, in warning all bartenders against selling intoxicants to habitual drunkards. Realizing the difficulty of bringing about the results hoped for by mere warning, the ladies of the union decided to go a step further and offer material and financial succor to all wives, daughters or mothers of habitual drunkards who wish to prosecute the violators of the liquor laws, but whose limited means prevent them.

MR. GROW HAD NO VOTES.

Ex-Lieut. Governor Davies Makes Statement to Correct an Error.

Every newspaper in the state, in printing a biographical sketch of the late Galusha A. Grow, stated that he came within one vote of securing the nomination of vice-president in place of Andrew Johnson who became president at the death of Lincoln. This statement was incorrect, as will be shown by the following statement made by ex-Lieutenant Governor Davies of Towanda:

To the Review:

In your issue of Tuesday, April 2, you publish an article dated Washington, April 1, wherein it is stated that in 1864 Galusha A. Grow came within one vote of being nominated for vice-president instead of Andrew Johnson, and you in your article in the same issue repeat above statement as true. The Republican National convention that nominated Abraham Lincoln for president and Andrew Johnson for vice-president was held at Baltimore, commencing June 7, 1864. Lincoln was nominated on the first ballot, receiving the vote of all the delegates except those from Missouri, they were cast for Gen. Grant. Andrew Johnson was also nominated on the first ballot and the vote at first ballot stood:

Andrew Johnson had 200 votes.
Daniel S. Dickinson had 108 votes.
Hannibal Hamlin had 150 votes.
Scattering .....59 votes

Before the vote was announced several delegations changed to Johnson, who was nominated without further balloting by 494 votes to 26 for others. Unless some of the scattering votes were cast for Mr. Grow he did not receive any votes in said convention. Kindly make the correction.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, ofttimes, with a debilitating, pelvic, catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

WILLIAM J. YOUNG PASSES INTO THE LIFE ETERNAL

Prominent Towandian and Well Known Attorney Is No More.

LONG AND USEFUL CAREER.

End Came Peacefully at 8:30 O'clock Monday Morning—Was Born in Towanda 70 Years Ago—Well Known as an Attorney and Prominent in Public Life.

William J. Young, Esq., a well known member of the Bradford county bar, and one of Towanda's oldest and most prominent citizens, passed into the life eternal at his home, corner Third and Bridge streets, Monday morning at 8:30 o'clock, after an illness dating back to April of last year. On the 24th of that month he suffered a stroke of paralysis, and after a few weeks' illness recovered sufficiently to resume his accustomed place in his law office and look after his other business interests. This he continued up until the first of March, when he again became ill and two weeks ago was compelled to take to his bed. He suffered another slight paralytic stroke, which together with his already seriously impaired health, made his recovery doubtful from the first. Everything that human hands can do, was done with no other result than to prolong the life which was slowly flickering out. Monday morning, with his devoted wife and daughters at his bedside, he passed away. He was conscious until the last, the end coming gently, without pain, and after hours of suffering the tired and pain racked body sank into peaceful repose, was at rest in the majestic sleep of death.

Sketch of His Life.

William J. Young, who has passed from mortal ken, was what can be truly termed a remarkable man. His 70 years of life were filled with activity, and at various times he followed the pursuits of farmer, merchant, justice of the peace, prothonotary, lawyer and business man. His passing marks the end of his immediate family, of which he was the eldest. Mr. Young was born in Towanda on March 24, 1837, in a log house which stood on what is now Washington street, at a point about where B. F. Myers's office is located. His father, Edward Young, was a native of Lincolnshire, Eng., who came to America in 1825, settling in what is now Towanda, where he worked along the river and run a ferry boat across at the foot of Washington street. He married Celinda Woodruff, a daughter of Jesse Woodruff, one of the pioneers in this section, and they took up their residence in the log house where the subject of this sketch was born in 1837. In 1839 when W. J. Young was but two years of age his parents moved to Columbia township, where they cleared a farm and spent their life.

Mr. Young attended the township schools and devoted his spare time to assisting his father about the farm. Always ambitious and anxious to improve his opportunities, he studied and took advantage of everything that came his way. During Monroe Smith's term of office as sheriff of Bradford county, Mr. Young served in the capacity of deputy and later entered the grocery business in Towanda in partnership with Mr. Titus, and continued in that line for some time. He was elected justice of the peace of Towanda, and for several years gave strict attention to the duties of that office, studying while not otherwise engaged. With a desire to increase his knowledge he entered the office of Davies & Peet as a student at law. In 1877 he was admitted to the bar, and soon after formed a partnership with I. McPherson, Esq. In 1881 he was elected prothonotary and was re-elected for a second term in 1884.

At the expiration of his term of office as prothonotary, he opened an office for the practice of law, and by hard work and close attention to business built up a good practice. In October, 1899, he purchased the then idle plant and property of the Towanda Knitting Mill company on Plank road street and commenced the manufacture of hosiery. On Jan. 1, 1904, the plant and business was incorporated, and the output of the industry was increased. Mr. Young gave much of his time to the knitting mill and continued to look after his law practice.

For several years he was a member of town council, being president of that body during his incumbency. He has also been a member of the school board, filling these offices with eminent satisfaction.

Ideal Home Life.

He was twice married, his first wife being Amelia Lilley, daughter of the late Dummer Lilley, a pioneer of Western Bradford, to which union two children were born, both now being deceased. In 1875 he was united in marriage to Harriet E. Felton of Towanda, who with two daughters, Miss Jennie F. Young, and Charlotte L Young, survive. Edward J. Young of Willard, N. Y., is a nephew of the deceased.

Too much in praise of the deceased could not be said. He was a man esteemed by all and his opinion on matters of law were much sought by fellow members of the bar. Honest and sincere, never faltering in what he believed to be his duty, he pursued the even tenor of his way. Always pleasant and agreeable with those with whom he came in contact, he made friends by the score, and he possessed the faculty of retaining them. Home was his club room, his fireside and family his shrine and there he spent his leisure hours, with those whom he loved best. His home life like his public life was ideal. In his passing out Towanda loses a good citizen, but the memory of his examplary life will long survive.

The Funeral.

The funeral services will be held at the home corner Third and Bridge streets, Thursday afternoon at three o'clock. Rev. E. A. Gernant, officiating. The Bradford County Bar association and Knights of Pythias of which the deceased was a member, will attend in a body. Interment will be made in Oak Hill cemetery.

Galusha Grow.

With simple, impressive ceremonies, the distinguished Pennsylvanian and American statesman, Galusha A. Grow, was on Wednesday, laid in his last resting place. The funeral was conducted from his home in Glenwood, at 1 p. m., and was private, only a few neighbors and intimate friends being present at the service, in addition to the members of the family.

There was no music and just a quiet, Christian service of Scripture reading and prayer, followed with an address. James DuBois, of the state department, Washington, D. C., had the management of the funeral arrangements and officially represented the government.

Rev. Joseph H. Odell, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Scranton, was the officiating clergyman. There was no other clergymen present.

Rev. Odell read the select portions of Scripture from the Presbyterian burial service, and led in prayer, after which he delivered an address, in which he dwelt at length upon the public service which Mr. Grow had rendered to his country, particularly emphasizing the fact that it was he who had convinced the idea of the Homestead act, by which six million people had been directly benefited.

After the service at Glenwood, the remains were taken to Harford cemetery, ten miles away, where interment took place, the Congregational minister of Harford, reading the service of committal.

The honorary pall bearers were W. F. Hallstead, T. E. Clarke, S. B. Chase, Judge Searle, W. M. Post, Hon. William Connell, and James DuBois. The active pall bearers were neighbors of Mr. Grow, namely: C. P. Kline, William Medlar, D. N. Hardy, Byron McDonald, E. E. Smith, and George Conrad.

In honor of the distinguished dead, flags were placed at half-mast Wednesday in Washington, D. C., and also in Montrose, the coutny seat of Susquehanna county. A large delegation of the Legal association of Susquehanna county attended the funeral, among them being Judge Searle, Messrs. Piney, Little, Davis, Smith, Courtright and Allen.

Mr. DuBois is authority for the statement that a movement is already under way to have congress make an appropriation for the erecting of a statute of Mr. Grow in Washington, D. C.

Roy Allen.

Ray Allen, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Allen of Towanda, passed away at Markleton, Pa., Saturday morning at 1:30, death being due to consumption. The funeral was held at Markleton Monday, and interment was made in the cemetery at that place.

Ray Allen was in his 26th year, and several years ago learned telegraphy in the Western Union office in the Washington street depot. He was employed there some time and later entered the employ of the Lehigh as an operator. Four years ago he secured a position with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company and was given a station at Markleton, where he has since resided, filling the position of operator with splendid satisfaction to his employers. He was twice married, his second wife passing away about a year ago. Besides his parents, the deceased is survived by two children and one brother, Earl Allen of Sayre.

Last Fall he visited his parents in Towanda, and with the knowledge that it was only a question of time until he must succumb to the dread disease which was making inroads on his health, he requested that after death, he be buried at Markleton beside the remains of his wife. His father, Officer J. W. Allen was at his bedside when dissolution took place and in compliance with the request that he be interred at Markleton, the remains were laid at rest in the cemetery at that place.

Teresa Walsh.

Miss Teresa Walsh, a former well known and estimable Towanda young lady, passed away in death at the family home in Ithaca, Saturday morning, after a long illness. She had been in poor health for a number of years and for the past four months had been confined to her bed.

She was a daughter of Maurice Walsh, for many years a well known and respected resident of this borough who removed to Ithaca about two years ago. Deceased was a young lady possessing many beautiful traits of character which endeared to a large circle of friends. Her long illness was borne patiently and without complaint, and when the silent summoner beckoned, there was a smile about the lips and the life ended as it had lived, believing and trusting in "Him who doeth all things well."

Besides the father and stepmother, deceased is survived by four sisters Mrs. William Burchill of Towanda, Misses Ella and Elizabeth Walsh of Ithaca, and Mrs. James McWilliams of Stanley, N. Y. The remains were brought to Towanda Sunday noon, and taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Burchill. The funeral was held at the Church of SS. Peter and Paul Monday morning at 9 o'clock; interment in the Catholic cemtery.

The funeral of the late Miss Teresa Walsh was held at the Church of SS., Peter and Paul, Monday morning, and was very largely attended. Rev. Father Boland conducted the mass, and delivered an eloquent sermon, paying a beautiful tribute to the life of the departed. The pall-bearers were John Burchill, John Barron, Thomas Bride, James Laughlin, Chas. Campbell, and Joseph Hoagland. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery at North Towanda.

Mrs. Eliza M. Silvara.

Mrs. Eliza M. Silvara departed this life at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Alice E. Sumners, April 6, aged 68 years, five months and eleven days. She had not enjoyed health for a number of years and it finally developed into that dread disease, cancer, which slowly drained her life away for the past two years. She bore it with christian patience, praying that the Lord would come quickly. She was a daughter of the late John and Elizabeth Keeler of Merryall, and held in her possession the first paper that was circulated for the support of the gospel in Merryall. She was converted and joined the M. E. church early in life. She married L. B. Silvara in 1857, and to them were born six children—Alice E., John K., Clinton L. Floy E., of New Albany; Mrs. W. F. Wilcox of Meshoppen, and Mrs. R. E. Hall of Grand Island, Neb. There are also three brothers, Henry Keeler of Oskaloosa, Kans; John G., of Wyalusing, and Elisha S. of this place. The funeral was held at the residence on Monday at 10 o'clock, Rev. E. Acker officiating. Text, "It shall be well with the righteous." Music was in charge of Miss Mabel Davis. Mrs. Bertha Corson rendered "Tired," a beautiful and appropriate solo for the opening. Miss Minnie Billings sang Gabriel's "Homeward," with quartet chorus Miss Annie VanDyke sang for the closing piece, "Beyond the Cloudrift." Those in attendance from out of town were Mrs. U. M. Fell of Towanda Mrs. Etna Elliott of Merryall, Mrs. Crete Hughes, Mrs. Emma Martin, Mrs. E. G. Silvara of Dushore. Interment in New Albany cemetery.

Wilmot grange, of which she was a member, and Colley grange conducted a very impressive and appropriate service for their departed sister.

Archie M. Woodward.

Deceased was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Woodward. He would have been 37 years of age on April 19. AT HMEN'S ALTAR.

McCarthy—Butler.

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Anne's church, Bentley Creek, on Thursday morning, April 4, when Anna Theresa Butler, one of Bentley Creek's fairest and most charming young ladies, became the bride of John A. McCarthy of Chicago. Miss Katharine Butler played the wedding march from Lohengrin, after which Rev. W. A. Gorman performed the ceremony, with a nuptial mass. The bride was attired in a blue traveling suit of chiffon cloth with white lace waist and blue picture hat, and was attended by her sister, Susie Veronica, of Elmira, who was also dressed in blue. Carter McCarthy brother of the groom, acted as best man. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Butler, and was formerly a popular Bradford county teacher, but for the past few years has been an accountant for the Bell Telephone company in Elmira, where she has won a large circle of friends. The groom is a young man of sterling qualities and charming personality; held in the highest esteem by his many relatives and friends at this place. While their many friends regret their departure to their distant home, yet they all unite in wishing them many years of blissful wedded life.

Eilenberger—Ricardo.

Quietly and unostentatiously, in strict accordance with the taste of the contracting parties, Miss Claribel Ricardo of Newark, on Tuesday evening, became the wife of Edward Eilenberger of Towanda. So well did Mr. Eilenberger and Miss Ricardo keep their secret that few knew of their plans until after they had been carried into effect. The ceremony was performed at the Methodist parsonge by Dr. Copeland, in the presence of the immediate relatives. Miss Ricardo is the daughter of Mrs. Regina M. Kinney. She is a charming young lady, who has a position as bookkeeper with H. B. Rodgers and is a favorite with young ladies and gentlemen of her age. Mr. Eilenberger is a son of Mrs. J. E. Muir of Towanda, and is a machinist in the Mora Car works, a young man of pleasing address, who has many friends in Newark. The newly married pair have secured pleasant apartments in the opera house flats where they will keep house and begin their married life under pleasant auspices.—Newark (N. Y.) Record.

Fellows—Manley.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. David Fellows in Canton, Sunday morning, when their daughter, Georgia, was married to Guy E. Manley of Rochester. Just the immediate relatives of the happy couple were present when the knot was tied by Rev. E. E. Manley, pastor of the First Christian church of Scranton, a cousin of the groom. After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served and shortly afterwards the couple left for a short wedding tour, after which they will be at home in Rochester, where Mr. Manley holds a responsible position with the Page Shoe company. Both he and his bride spent most of their lives in Canton, where they are well and favorably known and have a large circle of friends who join in wishing them happiness.

Kloss, of the Central Congregational church. The bride, who was unattended, wore a gown of soft white voile, trimmed with Irish point lace, and white net, and she carried a bunch of white roses. Breakfast was served after the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Tuton will return to 4952 Walton avenue, where they will be at home Wednesdays, after June 1. The groom-to-be, is a son of Hon. E. M. Barn Floor Gave Way.

While A. D. Hatch, the Bridge street harness dealer, was placing a surrey in the Crider barn on South Second street Friday, the floor gave way, and he was precipitated into the basement along with the surrey. Mr. Hatch escaped uninjured, and the surrey was not damaged to any extent.

Did you ever notice that tobacco is always clean? If a man drops a piece of meat, no matter how clean the floor may be, he will either give it a kick or pick it up and lay it to one side. He will never eat it. But let him drop a plug of tobacco on the ground and no matter how dirty the spot where it fell, he will pick it up and give it a careless wipe on his coat sleeve or on the bosom of his pants and then take a chew with greater relish than ever.

To Venus.

Ah! There you are my lovely star,
Shining clear and bright,
Mounting oe'r the dusky hills
Shedding rays of light;
Just before the break of day
In the early morning,
I often turn my eyes your way
And watch for your coming.

The clouds floating in the sky
Hide you from my sight,
Make me think you've disappeared
In the shades of night;
And the new day breaking
Flooding the earth with sunshine
Make me await your coming
Until another time.

THREE CORNERED FIGHT.

The withdrawal of Charles E. Mills from the contest for the Republican nomination for district attorney makes the fight a three cornered one, Charles M. Culver, H. K. Mitchell and Paul E. Maynard being the contestants. Mr. Mills has made asplendid district attorney and in view of the fact that the office has not ben a two termer, he shows the proper Republican spirit in withdrawing as a condidate for renomination. Judging from the past experiences of Mr. Culver, who has twice asked for the nomination, the last time being defeated by a very small majority, he seems to have an excellent chance of winning out in the coming primaries.

What do you suppose would happen if we were to print the fact that on a certain evening, in the dark of the moon, we saw a prominent married man sashaying about in the "rhubarbs" of the town with another man's wife? Or that a certain married business man had gone to the city and that he did not go alone but that he was accompanied by a nectarine, as the boys say? Not that we could say there was anything wrong, but they were certainly having a nice time—tut, tut, now don't sit up and begin to take notice. Of course it wasn't your hubby, it was the other woman's spouse. But we are not going to mention any names—as Billy Baxter says, "I never do, sober." * * * And the fellow who is so quick to kick at the paper for some things it does print, should cork up and go home and get down on his marrow bones and offer up thanks that the editor in the kindness of his heart did not print some things that he might have.—Sisseton (S. D.) Standard.

Great was the gathering of ministers, laymen and delegates from the various churches within the bounds of the Wyoming Conference in session at Lestershire, last week, presided over by Bishop Luther Wilson of Tennessee. In the conference are 249 preachers, 427 churches, 43,705 members, 4,500 probationers; $3,000,000 represetned in value of property; nearly $200,000 paid annually for pastors' support, and $2,000 toward salaries of bishops, while contributions to missions, education and various other benevolences amount to at least $30,000.

The members of the Maine legislature are to have twice as much salary in the future as is paid at present. And yet nobody is likely to make much of an outcry against the increase, since the enlarged salary will be but $300 per annum.

A bill has been presented to the legislature prohibiting the employment as a teacher in the public schools of a relative of any director except by a two-thirds vote of the board. It is a good idea and should become a law.

The people of Pennsylvania are not favorably impressed by the frantic efforts of some of their servants at Harrisburg to increase the revenues of the state by indiscriminate taxation. There is no call for swollen revenues.

A Brownsville lawyer was foiled in an attempt to kill his wife by the bullets from his revolver becoming tangled up in the folds of her silk gown. This is another good reason why a man should not dress his wife in silks.

A Pittsburger has declared that Harry Thaw a few years ago wanted to be the Democratic nominee for Governor of Pennsylvania. He was certainly "bug house" at that stage of the game, if not now.

More support for the good, old superstition. An Ohio preacher goes to the penitentiary because he married 13 wives.

WILLIAM J. YOUNG, ESQ.

William J. Young, Esq., who died at his home in Towanda Monday morning, probably had no living enemy. Perhaps he had his faults—who has not?—but in his relations toward his fellows which is the true test of a man's worth, his life was exemplary. His career was modeled in accordance with the Golden Rule. His mind was broad; his heart was filled with charity, he was a dignified, courteous, cultured gentleman.

Mr. Young was practically a self-made man who owed his success in life to his own efforts, unaided by fortune or influence. Such men have identified themselves with the foundation of the republic. They are to be found in all the pursuits of life—workers and toilers in the busy hives of industry; and whether as merchants or lawyers, or in any of the varied occupations, they lead lives of usefulness and leave honorable examples for those who come after to emulate.

To his ability as a lawyer, ex-Lieutenant Governor Davies pays a high tribute. Mr. Young studied law in the office of Davies & Peet, and in speaking of him Mr. Davies said: "He was admitted to the bar at an age when the ordinary man is at his best, being about 45 years of age, and we did not believe he would develop into a good practitioner, but we were mistaken in the man, for Mr. Young proved himself an excellent lawyer, with a knowledge of the law which was remarkable. He was a splendid councellor, and his judgment was supreme. He seldom missed his point, and was one of the best informed men at the bar. Honest as the day is long, he was a credit to the profession, and a gentleman whom it was indeed a pleasure to know."

While the death of Mr. Young removes from our midst one of our best citizens, after a long life of usefulness, we should, while mourning his demise, be thankful and rejoice in the thought that he has lived.

WHY DELAYED?

It looks as if the coming primary election throughout the state would have to be held under the law as it is, with its inconsistencies and defects. The legislature has not improved the chance to make desired changes.

Changes made now that the preliminary work required by the law has begun could hardly be put in operation until another year. There is confusion enough already about some of the features of the act; attempt to put in force any considerable amendment between now and the first Saturday of June would cause still further inconvenience and likely serious embarrassment. The legislature has wasted time which could have been given to this question, and it would have been all the easier to accomplish something because there was a pretty general understanding about what was needed.

Meantime disputes have arisen as to the meaning of certain provisions of the law, and as the system will operate this Spring for the first time in a large proportion of the counties these disputes will multiply. In many instances little attempt has been made by public and party officials who are intrusted with duties under the act to make themselves familiar with its requirements. The only excuse for this was the expectation that there would be new legislation to change some features. This has been waited for in vain, and cannot be waited for any longer, because the county commissioners are required at once to advertise the places that are to be filled at the next primary.

It is well enough understood that there are elements in the legislature seeking to discredit the whole system. This in some degree accounts for non-action. There are less inconsistencies and defects in the law than might have been expected from the short time given its consideration when enacted at the special session last year, but such of these as have been discovered help to prejudice the new nominating method. For that reason they should be removed, but it is not improbable that is the reason they have not been.

Whatever is done finally, however, it must be understood by its most persistent enemies that the system—the general principle of nominating by a direct vote—will remain. That is something that cannot now be taken away from the people.—Philadelphia Press.

THE TWO-CENT RATE LAW.

Governor Stuart has signed the two-cent rate bill, and this measure, for which there is such an insistent demand throughout the country, is now the law of the state. It provides that two cents per mile shall be the maximum rate which the railroads are allowed to charge for passenger transportation in Pennsylvania.

A similar law was enacted in Ohio about two years ago, and its effects are said to be very satisfactory to both the railroads and the public. The last Republican State convention inserted a pledge in the party platform to pass such a bill at the present session of the legislature, and the promise has now been redeemed.

There was no other course for the legislature to take than to enact this law. The people of the state almost unanimously demanded it, and practically every member of the legislature was pledged to vote for the bill. The railroads opposed the measure, and predictions were made that it would result in raising of commutation rates, which are lower than the maximum rate provided by the new law. Time will tell whether it will have this effect. If a mistake has been made it can be remedied, but there was never any question concerning the duty of the present legislature to enact the two-cent passenger rate law.

ROOSEVELT THEIR CHOICE.

A canvas of all the states of the Union, outside of the South, which has just been made by the New York Herald, shows that President Roosevelt is stronger than ever with the voters of the nation. The New York Times on Sunday last published the results of inquiry made of 500 Republican newspapers throughout the country as to whether the President is now as popular among the people as he was when elected, with similar result. This is the unanimous verdict of the men who are most closely in touch with the sentiment of the country; and they declare that the blazing enthusiasm with which the Republican party and a large proportion of Democrats have now come to the support of the President, is an astounding revelation.

It was hardly necessary to make these tests of public sentiment to discover how the people feel toward President Roosevelt for recent events have made plain how profoundly they trust and admire him. They see in his controversy with Mr. Harriman and in the efforts of corporation agents and political cabals, a peristent attempt to break his hold upon the people and defeat the policies with which his name is identified. They know he has not stopped for an instant in this battle for the rights and defenses of the people against extortion in the many forms that it assumes in modern business devices. And they are just beginning to realize the tremendous power of the opposition put up by corporate interests to defeat the President. As they learn the extent of the resources of the interests banded together to prey on the public they appreciate the courage and skill and relentless persistence of their President as he leads in the desperate fight, and the old passion of enthusiasm for him mounts higher every day as they understand wnat he is doing in their behalf.

In attempting to guage popular sentiment at this time it should be remembered that the professional politicians have always been hostile to Theodore Roosevelt, and that the whole monopolistic influence is bitterly antagonistic to him today. And now that the President has on his hands the biggest fight he ever had, these old enemies feel that they can pool their issues and defeat the legislation asked for by both the President and the people by preventing the nomination for President of any man who favors the measures with which President Roosevelt's name is identified. We believe this is the game now on foot. He is unpopular in certain political and standard oil circles, but if the people were today called on to choose between them and Theodore Roosevelt the vote would be practically unanimous in favor of the latter. And, it may be added, that in the present temper of the people, if they were called upon to name his successor as President the vote would be overwhelmingly in favor of the present incumbent.

Let it be made clear: the fight now being under cover against the President is really a fight against the people. The men who oppose vote legislation, pure food legislation, proper control and restriction of monopolies, all of which would greatly benefit the people—are exerting themselves to destroy the influence of the President, and their activity is prompted by their wish to defeat this legislation. It is not the man Roosevelt they are fighting but his policies. The people understand this for, in spite of his mistakes, and notwithstanding certain obvious defects, Theodore Roosevelt is the best friend—sometimes it seems as though he were the only friend—of the people at Washington. And this is why they are demanding with almost one voice that he be renominated so that the great work begun by him may be carried forward to its full fruition.

APRIL ANNIVERSARIES.

April is full of memories which an American should cherish, as teaching him great lessons of patriotism. April 19, 1775, the battle of Lexington was fought. A famous man has called this "the date of the liberty of the American world." April 30, 1789, on the street balcony, in old Federal Hall, in New York city, where the United States treasury now stands, George Washington took the oath as first President of our country. In April, 1847, a conflict of arms took place on the Rio Grande, between Mexican and American troops, which was the beginning of the Mexican war. April 12, 1861, our flag at Fort Sumter was fired upon by the rebels under General Beauregard, and the war of the rebellion began, while in April, 1865, the flag of our union floated again on Fort Sumpter, and April 2, 1866, the President declared the war at an end. April 19, 1861, the very anniversary of Lexington, the Sixth Massachusetts was attacked in the streets of Baltimore, and April 9, General Lee surrendered to General Grant after the capture of Richmond. April 15, 1861, Abraham Lincoln, one of our country's best Presidents, called for 75,000 militia for three months' service, and April 14, 1865, the noble patriot President was assassinated in Washington. In April, 1775, the first anti-slavery society was established in the United States, and in April, 1862, congress abolished slavery in the District of Columbia.

Several millionaires have banded together and raised a $5,000,000 fund with which to defeat and throw down Teddy Roosevelt in 1908. Poor fools. Five million dollars would not turn the Second ward of Towanda against Theodore, let alone carrying Bradford county, even.

ALL WILL COME OUT

Capitol Probers Are After the Men "Higher Up."

TRYING TO SHIFT THE BLAME

Those Responsible Are Beginning to Accuse Each Other, and the Whole Truth Will Soon Be Known—Other Harrisburg Gossip.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 8.—The legislative commission investigating the capitol building is after the men "higher up." Recently the commission has come into possession of information which leads the members to believe that the architect and one or two contractors are not the only ones who profited by the outrageous overcharges for furnishing and finishing the new state building.

It would not be wise to suggest who these "higher up" men are, but it will be conceded that two or three men who have never been known to control anything politically would be allowed to walk away with several millions of dollars worth of loot without at least a protest from those who do things politically. There is a gang of Philadelphia politicians who will certainly suffer some of the consequences of the inquiry.

Those who are immediately responsible for "the monument of graft" are already beginning to "peach" on one another. They are charging one another with the blame and soon the people will know the whole truth. No one ever even intimated that former Governor Samuel W. Pennypacker was guilty of wrong doing, but it is believed that people who professed to be his friends took advantage of his confidence in their honesty to feather their nests. Now the former governor would like to go on the stand and tell what he knows about the capitol building. He has written the commission that he would like to testify and is ready to do so when the commission asks him. He will be called to the witness stand soon.

Mr. Pennypacker's resolution, or the one to which his name is attached and which provided for the letting of the contract for furnishing the capitol as a whole, is the measure which permitted the wild waste of money and allowed the John H. Sanderson Company, of Philadelphia, to get away with the contract for furnishing the capitol building without competition in the bidding. Mr. Pennypacker would like to tell how it happened that that resolution was presented.

Heretofore the former governor always has declared that the capitol is worth the money, that it was honestly built and that the people would not complain at any extravagance if they would see the building for themselves. It is believed that he has since changed his mind.

When former Governor Pennypacker discovers that there was a deep laid conspiracy, that plans were made for stealing millions of dollars from the state months before bids were even advertised for; when he learns that he was made the "goat" and that his own alleged friends used him to corruptly further their own financial ends, then he will wake up and it is expected that he will tell a lot of things to the edification of the people of this great state.

The lawyers for the commission have started out to uncover the conspiracy and they have laid a most excellent foundation. Just what will happen to a man who sells the state a species of black slate for marble at the rate of $4.74 a foot when it would be dear at 50 cents a foot you can determine pretty well yourself. And then this black slate was not even polished as required by the specifications called for, but was lacquered.

If a store would sell you at a fancy figure "baccarat" cut glass, or rather charge you "baccarat" cut glass prices for an article made in Pennsylvania and at the same time insist that it was the imported article you would have pretty good ground for having him arrested for receiving money under false pretense and recovering the amount of the overcharge, would you not?

Sold Air By the Foot.

And then if it could be shown that the filing cases for which the state paid $2,000,000 were sold by the "per foot" measurement and that a lot of air space was measured in with the cases don't you think you could recover the price you paid for the air at least? Well, that is what the investigating commission is setting out to do. The commission has found other things since it began operations and the work is becoming so vast that the commission has notified the legislature that it is impossible to tell at present when its work will be finished. The capitol overcharges by Sanderson alone gave Architect Joseph M. Huston an unearned fee of $97,507. He may have to reimburse the state to this amount. He also has a claim for $104,000 against the state, but it is needless to say this never will be paid.

The wrangle that ensued in the house over the resolution to adjourn finally on May 16 is not yet at an end, although the resolution was adopted. The senate has passed a resolution calling for final adjournment May 2. It will be necessary in consequence to appoint a committee on conference in each house. It is thought that the date to be agreed upon will be May 16, but this is not certain. There was strong opposition to the adjournment resolution and even though this date is finally agreed upon this action may be upset before adjournment day arrives.

The difficulty is that every member who has introduced bills is anxious to get action upon them and he will be opposed to adjourning until something is done. If there were a boss to dictate how and when things should be done it would be easy enough to issue orders and call a halt whenever desired. Even though a great lot of bills should not be acted upon adjournment could be forced at any time if things were being run as they once were in the legislature.

Complaint is being made by members of the house that even though the house does pass their bills the senate refuses to take action upon them and is a virtual "graveyard" for a great many bills. The measures passed by the house are referred by the senate to committees and that is the last heard of many of them.

Notwithstanding the hostility of some of the leaders to the bill permitting the people to express their choice of candidates for United States senator there is some probability that the bill will pass the senate this week. It got through the house without much trouble, but when it reached the senate a motion was made to refer it to the committee on elections. The motion was carried before the senators really knew what they were voting on, the bill having been referred to only by number. Then there were some indignant senators. Friends of the bill set to work at once and it is more than likely to become a law. It is argued that nothing would conduce to a cleaning up of the legislature more than the enactment of such a law. Heretofore politics has been played to the limit in the legislature preceding the election of a United States senator and legislation of all kinds, especially of the meritorious kind, has had to suffer as a consequence.

Members of the house are a little shy about voting for the final passage of the bill increasing the salaries of senators and representatives to $1500 a year, but it looks as if the bill would be passed.

House Passed Trolley Freight Bill.

Without a dissenting vote the trolley freight bill passed the house and is now on its way through the senate. It will probably become a law in its present shape. The Grangers are probably more interested in this bill than in any other that has been introduced.

The Wickersham medical council bill, which recognizes the osteopaths and provides for their examination and licensing the same as regular practitioners of medicine, also passed the house with a hop, skip and jump, after an old-fashioned aleopathic bill had been sent back to committee. If the senate approves the osteopaths will have the same footing in the state as doctors of medicine.

The wonder of wonders is that the bill providing for the intiative and referendum passed the house and is now on its way through the senate. Two years ago "Farmer" Creasy, the Democratic leader of the house, introduced the same kind of bill, but never was able to get it reported out of committee. It is not believed that the senate will pass it finally.

Among the bills that have passed both houses and are now up to the governor are the following: Making the open season for killing rabbits from October 15 to December 1; limiting the state game preserves to a circumference of nine miles; providing that when defendants enter pleas of guilty they be sentenced forthwith without a bill of indictment being presented to the grand jury; making the constables of boroughs and townships and supervisors in townships and the employes in the department of forestry ex-officio fire wardens; fixing the maximum amount to be spent by the state armory board for an armory for a company of infantry at $25,000 and a battery of artillery or troop of cavalry at $30,000; providing that in boroughs where the salary of the chief burgess is less than $50 a month the borough council may increase the pay to $50; authorizing cities, boroughs or townships to contract with street railway companies to operate their lines; establishing schools for adult foreigners to teach them the English language and American ideas.

Pension Bill Vetoed.

Governor Stuart vetoed the bill granting an annuity of $120 to Deborah E. Green Childs, daughter of a soldier of the War of 1812, who is not entitled to a pension from the national or state governments. The governor's veto says: "In my judgment it is not good policy for the state to grant individual annuities. While this may be a very worthy case, yet others which may be equally as worthy are not provided for."

Governor Stuart is closely watching all legislation and proposes to see that all measures promised by the Republican party are enacted.

The governor has a very effective club he can wield if he wishes to do so. He can inform members of the legislature that if they do not pass the measures pledged in party platforms he will refuse to sign bills in which they are particularly interested.

The governor is likely to surprise and disappoint a good many legislators when bills come to him for his signature. Great effort is being made particularly by Dauphin county law makers and those of nearby counties to get through the bill for the capitol park extension. The cost of this improvement would be about $1,600,000, according to estimate. There is also a bill pending for the reconstruction and enlargement of the executive mansion, the cost of which is estimated at $200,000. It is a safe guess that if these bills ever should reach the governor he will veto both of them.

The governor stands for economy. If he errs it will be on the economical side, for he is a conservative of the strictest type. He is not making himself very popular with the old time machine man but he seems to be making good with others who are not of that order. BAN Q. BARTON.

A CORRECTION

Concerning An Alleged Birthday Party at Laquin.

Some person, at present unknown, sent the Reporter-Journal a communication from Laquin, Pa., giving an account of a birthday party alleged to have been given by Miss Lillian C. Mapes, which was very misleading. For instance, the article stated that Miss Mapes was 25 years of age, when she is only 17, and it was written up as an elaborate affair, when the truth is, as Miss Mapes herself writes this paper, she gave a luncheon to only a few intimate friends, and it was no birthday anniversary whatever. The Reporter-Journal cheerfully makes this correction, and gives notice that if the name of the party who sent in the false report is learned prosecution will follow. Events to newspapers is one tning, and misleading reports is another. Some persons think false news is a joke, but the law does not look at it in that light.

Charles H. Morse.

Charles H. Morse, a well known and respected resident of Athens, died at his home on Satterlee street, March 4, of paralysis. He had gradually failed in health and first noticed the approach of the dread disease about four years ago, since which time he had been confined to the house. He bore his afflictions bravely, ministered to by kind hands and loving hearts. The deceased was born at Elmira, May 28, 1844. In 1870 he married Miss Harriet M. Carey of Springfield, where Mr. Morse learned the bakers' trade, remaining there until 1876, when he moved to Athens, where he conducted a bakery until 1880, since which time he has followed the draying business, until stricken with the disease that caused his death. Frank, generous, open-hearted, he made friends wherever he lived. A kind father and loving husband, he leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife, a daughter, Mrs. J. F. Gable of Athens, a sister, Mrs. Mary Roper of Elmira, and a brother, Augustus of Piqua, Ohio. Funeral services were held March 6, conducted by Rural Amity Lodge, No. 70, of which deceased was a member, Rev. Mr. VanTobel officiating; interment in Tioga Point cemetery.

The Judge Uses Forceful Language.

Judge W. B. Simmons of Fincastle, Va., told the reporter that L. & M. Paint was used on his residence in 1882, and held its color well for 21 years; he furthermore said that 3 years ago he was induced to use another paint and is sorry he did, because the other paint didn't make good. The Judge will now always use L. & M., because he knows if any defect exists in L. & M. Paint the house will be painted for nothing.

ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE.

Pady Dadoni, an Italian, who has been employed on the Susquehanna and New York railroad section gang, at Cold Springs, seven miles West of Laquin is in the county jail, charged with assault and battery with intent to have carnal relation with Jennie Campani, the ten years old daughter of James Campani, the section boss at Cold Springs. The revolting actions of Dadoni are alleged to have occurred Tuesday afternoon, and he is accused of having used a 32 calibre revolver to intimidate the child. Before he could carry out his fiendish intentions, the little girl escaped and ran to where her father was working, and informed him of Dadoni's actions.

The enraged father hurried home, secured a gun and went after Dadoni. He found his man in the woods, and after a little maneuvering got the drop on him and effected his capture. The prisoner was marched to the old Cold Springs depot where he was made a prisoner. Constable Hollon was communicated with, and Dadoni was kept in the depot Tuesday night, three men armed with guns standing guard to prevent escape.

Wednesday morning Constable Hollon, with a warrant issued by 'Squire Meredith, went to Cold Springs and brought Dadoni to Towanda, where he was arraigned before the justice, and upon entering a plea of not guilty, was committed to jail in default of $500 bail. He will have a hearing before 'Squire Meredith Saturday afternoon between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock.

FAMOUS OIL WELL FAILS.

The "Clairvoyant" at Gaines Has Been Abondoned.

The test well at Gaines, known as the "Clairvoyant" oil well, has been abandoned. This was one of the most remarkable wells ever drilled, and probably closes the last chapter of the Gaines oil field. The well was let under contract to drill 4,000 feet for $10,000. A year was consumed in drilling the 4,000 feet when it was decided to go to the depth of 5,000 feet in order to reach the so-called Trenton rock. Great difficulties and obstacles were overcome until 4,842 feet deep was reached. At this point the tools became fast and in trying to loosen them the cable parted and the set was lost. Considerable time was spent in trying to recover them but without success.

This is the deepest well ever drilled in Pennsylvania. It was located by Mrs. E. M. Day, a clairvoyant, of Elmira, from a dream, and so strong was her faith in the well that she spent over $12,000 in drilling it and for the past six months has paid a monthly rental of $20. No oil or gas sand was found.

"After a careful study and investigation of the present political situation in the county and after many extended talks with my friends in this regard, it appears that the sentiment of the voters is not in favor of making the district attorney's office a two-term one. I therefore withdraw from the fight, and in doing so wish to most sincerely thank the many people who have been friendly to me and who have aided and have been willing to aid me in my canvass.

He is now a member of the "pebble push" in the rear of the court house.

A CELEBRATED CONTROVERSY.

Common Pleas Judge Opines in Case of Johnson and Hainsworth, Practically the Same as in the Allen Case —May Go to Supreme Court.

Illegal fishing cases continue to hold the attention of the courts, both local and county, and two or three defendants, are making plans to carry their cases to the superior court and from there to the Supreme. Judge Fanning has handed down another opinion in which he closely follows the principles involved in the Allen case, and which is related to that now destined to be celebrated controversy in different ways. In the case of Marion Johnson and Richard Hainesworth of Athens, the Judge has affirmed the conviction had and fine imposed in Justice Meredith's court recently.

Mr. Allen, it will be remembered was convicted and fined by 'Squire Meredith, from which he appealed to the court of comon pleas. Judge Fanning in deciding the case based his decision upon the opinion of the superior court which held in a similar case from another county, that it was the method employed in fishing and not the species of fish caught which made Mr. Allen's act illegal and subjected him to a fine of $25 and costs. As this opinion was rendered by the superior court on a case from another county, it is understood that Mr Allen's attorneys, H. F. Maynard and W. G. Schrier will take their client's case to the superior court. If the decision is against them it is the intention to carry the case to the Supreme court. On the outcome of this case hangs the fate of the Johnson-Hainsworth controversy.

Peculiar Features.

The arrest and conviction of Messrs. Johnson and Hainsworth is a peculiar feature of the illegal fishing question in Bradford county, several cases which have already been in the courts. Mr. Allen was arrested and convicted for using a fish basket in the Susquehanna river at a point near Athens. He had a license which called for the use of slats in the basket, but his conviction was secured on the ground that a wire screen was used instead of the slats. Now Messrs. Johnson and Hainsworth have been convicted for using the same fish basket without a license, and without Mr. Allen, the licensee being present at the time. They sat up the defense that the rack was licensed, but the law states that but one person can operate a fish basket on a license.

Allen's Fatal Testimony.

Another peculiar feature of the case is that the arrest of Mr. Allen was made on a warrant based on the testimony which he gave in 'Squire Meredith's court in the defense of Messrs. Hainsworth and Johnson. They had been arrested first and were being tried before the justice and Mr. Allen was one of their witnessess. The testimony he gave on the witness stand resulted in his arrest and conviction before the parties left 'Squire Meredith's court that day. Now comes the struggle in the higher courts.

If the cases are taken all along the line to the Supreme court, it will form one of the most interesting controversies yet to arise in this county, and the outcome will be eagerly watched for.

DOCTORS IN SESSION.

Bradford County Medical Society Met on Tuesday Afternoon.

The regular monthly meeting of the Bradford County Medical Society was held in the court house on Tuesday afternoon, and was quite well attended. Dr. George B. Taylor of Towanda read a paper on the "Preparation and Manufacture of Diphtheritic Antitoxin." The paper was very interesting, and brought out a good discussion of this important subject.

Those present at the meeting were Drs. Ott, Wright, Everett and Fish of Sayre; Dr. Conklin of Orwell, Dr. G. H. B. Terry of Wyalusing, Dr. Herrmann of Dushore, Drs. C. M. Pratt, T. Ben Johnson, S. M. Woodburn, C. M. Woodburn and George B. Taylor of Towanda.

Fatally Injured.

Quarino Barnebei, an Italian employed by the Lehigh Valley in the laboring gang attached to the work train was fatally injured at Laceyville Sunday morning. He was standing by the track wating for an engine to pass, and did not notice a claw bar with one end projecting over the rail. The engine struck the bar and it flew up and struck Barnabei on the head, inflicting a severe cut of the scalp, and fracturing the skull. He was taken to Sayre on a special train and taken to the hospital, where he died a few hours later.

FISH CASE SETTLED.

Moses Frutchey of Standing Stone, Paid the Bill Without Complaint.

Moses Frutchey of Standing Stone township, on Thursday proved himself a wise man, when he entered 'Squire Meredith's emporium of justice and paid fine and costs, amounting to $26.95, for illegal fishing. Mr. Frutchey was arested on the 18th of last October, charged with violation of the fish laws. He never made any plea, never asked for a hearing and on Thursday when he came to Towanda and arranged for the dropping of the proceedings by paying all that is required by law he proved his wisdom.

There are several cases of a similar nature yet to be decided in the local courts, and it is said that one or two defendants, not satisfied with justice court findings, Judge Fanning's opinion or the opinion of the superior court, have decided to take a case to the supreme court, for a last and final test.

SOUVENIR TRIAL LIST.

New Innovation to Be Introduced in Luzerne County.

District Attorney Salsburg of Luzerne county, intends to make a new innovation at the coming term of criminal court by publishing a trial list in such shape that the book will be kept for a souvenir. Heretofore the books have been printed as cheaply as possible, but Mr. Salsburg will have the best of calendared book paper used, while the cover will be of card board of a most pretty design and the inside sheets will be fastened in the covers with silken cords.

Another improvement will be that enough space will be left between each case so that attorneys can make notes and this will be a great improvement over the old booklets.

Service to Be Continued.

When the farmers get their heads together something has to come. The recent announcement that four of the rural free delivery routes from Mansfield were to be changed from a daily to a tri-weekly service, unless a better showing in the matter of the number of pieces of mail matter handled should be made, woke up the patrons. They played a game of get together, and the result was that during March the carrier on each route did more than the required amount of business. This assures the daily service for the present, at least. Just what the farmers did, and how they did it, is knowledge of their own. But, so long as it has prevented crippling of the service, no one is anxious to wrest the secret from them.

Three Good Shows Booked.

Manager C. T. Kirby has three good shows booked for Hale's Opera House for the next few weeks. Next Thursday evening, April 11, "A Ragged Hero" will be the attraction, and on the evening of the 22nd "Are You a Mason" will hold the boards, followed by "My Mother-in-Law" on May 2. Lyman Howe's moving picture show is booked for May 24.

Pleaded Not Guilty.

John Milliard, the man accused of forging a check at Laquin, and who was arrested at Monroeton Tuesday night, on being arraigned before Justice Meredith, pleaded not guilty, and he will be given a hearing Saturday morning between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock.

New Engine Installed.

A new Morse-Fairbanks gas engine has been installed by the Towanda Printing company, to take the place of the water motor in driving the linotype machine. The engine is one of the latest improved and is the first of the kind to be installed in Towanda.

STEVE BARNER CONVERTED.

Ghent Gentleman Now a Firm Believer in Advertising.

Steve Barner, the gentleman from Ghent, erstwhile hero of a battle with a skunk, has been converted into a firm believer in advertising, and thereby hangs a tale.

Mr. Barner came to Towanda one day last week, and at Dye & Bresee's purchased an axe, and at I. P. Spalding's invested in a dozen doughnuts. His horse and wagon were left standing on Main street, and just as he went to put the articles in the wagon, some friend came along and asked him if he had been up against the skunk proposition lately. During the chat Mr. Barner took occasion to put the axe and doughnuts in a wagon and without taking particular notice as to the vehicle, walked away with the friend. That night when he reached home the axe and doughnuts were missing, and thinking they had fell out of the wagon he came to Towanda Monday morning, and at The Review office invested 25 cents in advertising in the hopes of recovering the lost articles.

Mr. Barner turned the corner of Park street, after leaving the office and came face to face with Frank Vought, who lives on a neighboring farm. Mr. Vought on reaching home that day Mr. Barner purchased the axe and doughnuts, found the articles carefully tucked under the seat of his wagon where Mr. Barner had placed them thinking it was his own wagon. Not knowing who the articles belonged to Mr. Vought ate the doughnuts, and Monday morning while in town learned that Mr. Barner had purchased an axe and started out to find his neighbor. When they met on the corner of Park street, Mr. Barner was informed where the axe was and where the doughnuts had gone, and in company with Mr. Vought hurried back to The Review where the 25 cents which had been taken for the advertisement, was cheerfully refunded.

This incident together with the skunk adventure has firmly convinced and fully converted Steve Barner into the ranks of the believers in the power of printer's ink.

Madigan Making Good.

A Montreal newspaper, in an article regarding that city's base ball team, which is a member of the Eastern League, says that Manager Kittredge made the following statement: "That boy Madigan is going to be the sensation of the Eastern League this season. He is a wonder, hits hard, has a good head and his throwing is great. Joyce Phelan and Madigan will make the strongest outfield of any team in the League." Manager Kittredge refers to "Two Bagger Mike" Madigan, of Towanda.

Ten Men on the Stone Pile.

Under guard of Constable McCracken and Jesse Schoonover, ten prisoners were at work on the stone pile on Monday. Among the number were Mike Vincent, the chicken fancier, Phillip Kipp, Jr., one time the headliner with Walter L. Main's circus, "Monkey Jim" Vanderpool, and Jim Crow, the Italian, who by the way is the beau brummel of the gang. The guards keep the men pegging away and the pile of cracked stone is increasing rapidly.

Another Fish Law.

Governor Stuart has approved a new fish law, which is important to many in this county. It reads: "Providing that game fish may be caught only with rod and line or hand line containing not more than three hooks and that pickerel or yellow perch may be caught through the ice by use of tip-ups and providing that the total catch of perch and pickerel on any one day by any one fisherman shall not exceed 20 pounds."

Crow Pleads Not Guilty.

CHAPTER XXVII.

BUT Loder did not leave London, and the hour of 2 on the day following his dismissal of Chilcote found him again in his sitting room.

He sat at the center table surrounded by a cloud of smoke; a pipe was between his lips and the morning's newspapers lay in a heap beside his elbow. To the student of humanity his attitude was intensely interesting. It was the attitude of a man trammeled by the knowledge of his strength. Before him as he sat smoking stretched a future of absolute nothingness, and toward this blank future one portion of his consciousness—a struggling and as yet scarcely sentient portion—pushed him inevitably; while another—a vigorous, persistent, human portion—cried to him to pause. So actual, so clamorous, was this silent mental combat that had raged unceasingly since the moment of his renunciation that at last in physical response to it he pushed back his chair.

"It's too late," he said aloud. "I'm a fool. It's too late."

Then abruptly, astonishingly, as though in direct response to his spoken thought, the door opened and Chilcote walked into the room.

Slowly Loder rose and stared at him. The feeling he acknowledged to himself was anger, but below the anger a very different sensation ran riotously strong. And it was in time to this second feeling, this sudden, lawless joy, that his pulses beat as he turned a cold face on the intruder.

"Well?" he said sternly.

But Chilcote was impervious to sternness. He was mentally shaken and distressed, though outwardly irreproachable, even to the violets in the lapel of his coat—the violets that for a week past had been brought each morning to the door of Loder's rooms by Eve's maid. For one second, as Loder's eyes rested on the flowers, a sting of ungovernable jealousy shot through him; then as suddenly it died away, superseded by another feeling—a feeling of new, spontaneous joy. Worn by Chilcote or by himself, the flowers were a symbol!

"Well?" he said again in a gentler voice.

Chilcote had walked to the table and laid down his hat. His face was white and the muscles of his lips twitched nervously as he drew off his gloves.

"Thank heaven, you're here!" he said shortly. "Give me something to drink."

In silence Loder brought out the whisky and set it on the table; then instinctively he turned aside. As plainly as though he saw the action he mentally figured Chilcote's furtive glance, the furtive movement of his fingers to his waistcoat pocket, the hasty dropping of the tabloids into the glass. For an instant the sense of his tacit connivance came to him sharply; the next, he flung it from him. The human, inner voice was whispering its old watchword. The strong man has no time to waste over his weaker brother!

When he heard Chilcote lay down his tumbler he looked back again. "Well, what is it?" he said. "What have you come for?" He strove resolutely to keep his voice severe but, try as he might, he could not quite subdue the eager force that lay behind his words. Once again, as on the night of their second interchange, life had become a phoenix, rising to fresh existence even while he sifted its ashes. "Well?" he said once again.

Chilcote had set down his glass. He was nervously passing his handkerchief across his lips. There was something in the gesture that attracted Loder. Looking at him more attentively, he saw what his own feelings and the other's conventional dress had blinded him to—the almost piteous panic and excitement in his visitor's eyes.

"Something's gone wrong!" he said, with abrupt intuition.

Chilcote started. "Yes—no—that is, yes," he stammered.

Loder moved around the table. "Something's gone wrong," he repeated, "and you've come to tell me."

The tone unnerved Chilcote. He suddenly dropped into a chair. "It—it wasn't my fault!" he began. "I—I have had a horrible time!"

Loder's lips tightened. "Yes," he said, "yes, I understand."

The other glanced up with a gleam of his old suspicion. "'Twas all my nerves, Loder"—

"Of course. Yes, of course." Loder's interruption was curt.

Chilcote eyed him doubtfully. Then recollection took the place of doubt, and a change passed over his expression. "It wasn't my fault," he began hastily. "On my soul, it wasn't! It was Crapham's beastly fault for showing her into the morning room"—

Loder kept silent. His curiosity had flared into sudden life at the other's words, but he feared to break the shattered train of thought even by a word.

In the silence Chilcote moved uneasily. "You see," he went on at last, "when I was here with you I—I felt strong. I—I"— He stopped.

"Yes, yes. When you were here with me you felt strong."

"Yes, that's it. While I was here I felt I could do the thing. But when I went home—when I went up to my rooms"— Again he paused, passing his handkerchief across his forehead.

"When you went up to your rooms?" Loder strove hard to keep his control.

"To my room?— Oh, I—I forget about that. I forget about the night"— He hesitated confusedly. "All I remember is the coming down to breakfast next morning—this morning— at 12 o'clock"—

Loder turned to the table and poured himself out some whisky. "Yes," he acquiesced in a very quiet voice.

At the word Chilcote rose from his seat. His disquietude was very evident. "Oh, there was breakfast on the table when I came downstairs—breakfast, with flowers and a horrible, dazzling glare of sun. It was then, Loder, as I stood and looked into the room, that the impossibility of it all came to me—that I knew I couldn't stand it—couldn't go on."

Loder swallowed his whisky slowly. His sense of overpowering curiosity held him very still, but he made no effort to prompt his companion.

Again Chilcote shifted his position agitatedly. "It had to be done," he said disjointedly. "I had to do it—then and there. The things were on the bureau—the pens and ink and telegraph forms. They tempted me."

Loder laid down his glass suddenly. An exclamation rose to his lips, but he checked it.

At the slight sound of the tumbler touching the table Chilcote turned, but there was no expression on the other's face to affright him.

"They tempted me," he repeated hastily. "They seemed like magnets; they seemed to draw me toward them. I sat at the bureau staring at them for a long time. Then a terrible compulsion seized me—something you could never understand—and I caught up the nearest pen and wrote just what was in my mind. It wasn't a telegram, properly speaking. It was more a letter. I wanted you back, and I had to make myself plain. The writing of the message seemed to steady me; the mere forming of the words quieted my mind. I was almost cool when I got up from the bureau and pressed the bell"—

"The bell?"

"Yes. I rang for a servant. I had to send the wire myself, so I had to get a cab." His voice rose to irritability. "I pressed the bell several times, but the thing had gone wrong; 'twouldn't work. At last I gave it up and went into the corridor to call some one."

"Well?" In the intense suspense of the moment the word escaped Loder.

"Oh, I went out of the room, but there at the door, before I could call anybody, I knocked up against that idiot Greening. He was looking for me—for you, rather—about some beastly Wark affair. I tried to explain that I wasn't in a state for business. I tried to shake him off, but he was worse than Blessington! At last, to be rid of the fellow, I went with him to the study"—

"But the telegram?" Loder began. Then again he checked himself. "Yes—yes—I understand," he added quietly.

"I'm getting to the telegram! I wish you wouldn't jar me with sudden questions. I wasn't in the study more than a minute more than five or six minutes"— His voice became confused, the strain of the connected recital was telling upon him. With nervous haste he made a rush for the end of his story. "I wasn't more than seven or eight minutes in the study; then, as I came downstairs Crapham met me in the hall. He told me that Lillian Astrupp had called and wished to see me and that he had shown her into the morning room"—

"The morning room?" Loder suddenly stepped back from the table. "The morning room? With your telegram lying on the bureau?"

His sudden speech and movement startled Chilcote. The blood rushed to his face, then died out, leaving it ashen. "Don't do that, Loder!" he cried. "I—I can't bear it!"

With an immense effort Loder controlled himself. "Sorry," he said. "Go on!"

"I'm going on. I tell you I'm going on! I got a horrid shock when Crapham told me. Your story came clattering through my mind. I knew Lillian had come to see you. I knew there was going to be a scene"—

"But the telegram! The telegram!"

Chilcote paid no heed to the interruption. He was following his own train of ideas. "I knew she had come to see you. I knew there was going to be a scene. When I got to the morning room my hand was shaking so that I could scarcely turn the handle; then, as the door opened, I could have cried out with relief. Eve was there as well!"

"Eve?"

"Yes. I don't think I was ever so glad to see her in my life." He laughed almost hysterically. "I was quite civil to her, and she was—quite sweet to me"— Again he laughed.

Loder's lips tightened.

"You see, it saved the situation. Even if Lillian wanted to be nasty, she couldn't while Eve was there. We talked for about ten minutes. We were quite an amiable trio. Then Lillian told me why she'd called. She wanted me to make a fourth in a theater party at the Arcadian tonight, and I—I was so pleased and so relieved that I said yes!" He paused and laughed again unsteadily.

In his tense anxiety Loder ground his heel into the floor. "Go on!" he said fiercely. "Go on!"

"Don't!" Chilcote exclaimed. "I'm going on—I'm going on." He passed his handkerchief across his lips. "We talked for ten minutes or so, and then Lillian left. I went with her to the hall door, but Crapham was there too—so I was still safe. She laughed and chatted and seemed in high spirits as we crossed the hall, and she was still smiling as she waved to me from her motor. But then, Loder—then, as I stood in the hall, it all came to me suddenly. I remembered that Lillian must have been alone in the morning room before Eve found her! I remembered the telegram! I ran back to the room, meaning to question Eve as to how long Lillian had been alone, but she had left the room. I ran to the bureau—but the telegram wasn't there!"

"Gone?"

"Yes, gone. That's why I've come straight here."

For a moment they confronted each other. Then, moved by a sudden impulse, Loder pushed Chilcote aside and crossed the room. An instant later the opening and shutting of doors, the hasty pulling out of drawers and moving of boxes came from the bedroom.

Chilcote, shaken and nervous, stood for a minute where his companion had left him. At last, impelled by curiosity, he too crossed the narrow passage and entered the second room.

The full light streamed in through the open window; the keen spring air blew freshly across the housetops, and on the window sill a band of grimy, joyous sparrows twittered and preened themselves. In the middle of the room stood Loder. His coat was off, and round him on chairs and floor lay an array of waistcoats, gloves and ties.

For a space Chilcote stood in the doorway staring at him, then his lips parted and he took a step forward. "Loder," he said anxiously, "Loder, what are you going to do?"

Loder turned. His shoulders were stiff, his face alight with energy. "I'm going back," he said, "to unravel the tangle you have made."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

LODER'S plan of action was arrived at before he reached Trafalgar square. The facts of the case were simple. Chilcote had left an incriminating telegram on the bureau in the morning room at Grosvenor square. By an unlucky chance Lillian Astrupp had been shown up into that room, where she had remained alone until the moment that Eve, either by request or by accident, had found her there. The facts resolved themselves into one question: What use had Lillian made of those solitary moments? Without deviation, Loder's mind turned toward one answer. Lillian was not the woman to lose an opportunity, whether the space at her command was long or short.

So convinced was he that, reaching Trafalgar square, he stopped and hailed a hansom.

"Cadogan gardens!" he called. "No. 33."

The moments seemed very few before the cab drew up beside the curb and he caught his second glimpse of the enameled door with its silver fittings. Instantly he pressed the bell the door was opened by Lillian's discreet, deferential manservant.

"Is Lady Astrupp at home?" he asked.

The man looked thoughtful. "Her ladyship lunched at home, sir"— he began cautiously.

But Loder interrupted him. "Ask her to see me," he said laconically.

The servant expressed no surprise. His only comment was to throw the door wide.

"If you'll wait in the white room, sir," he said, "I'll inform her ladyship." Chilcote was evidently a frequent and a favored visitor.

In this manner Loder for the second time entered the house so unfamiliar—and yet so familiar in all that it suggested. Entering the drawing room, he had leisure to look about him. It was a beautiful room, large and lofty. Luxury was evident on every hand, but it was not the luxury that palls or offends. Each object was graceful and possessed its own intrinsic value. The atmosphere was too effeminate to appeal to him, but he acknowledged the taste and artistic delicacy it conveyed. Almost at the moment of acknowledgment the door opened to admit Lillian.

"I thought it would be you," she said enigmatically.

Loder came forward. "You expected me?" he said guardedly. A sudden conviction filled him that it was not the evidence of her eyes, but something at once subtler and more definite that prompted her recognition of him.

She smiled. "Why should I expect you? On the contrary, I'm waiting to know why you're here?"

He was silent for an instant. Then he answered in her own light tone. "As far as that goes," he said, "let's make it my duty call—having dined with you. I'm an old fashioned person."

For a full second she surveyed him amusedly. Then at last she spoke. "My dear Jack"—she laid particular stress on the name—"I never imagined you punctilious. I should have thought bohemian would have been more the word."

Loder felt disconcerted and annoyed. Either, like himself, she was fishing for information or she was deliberately playing with him. In his perplexity he glanced across the room toward the fireplace.

Lillian saw the look. "Won't you sit down?" she said, indicating the couch. "I promise not to make you smoke. I shan't even ask you to take off your gloves!"

Loder made no movement. His mind was unpleasantly upset. It was nearly a fortnight since he had seen Lillian, and in the interval her attitude had changed, and the change puzzled him. It might mean the philosophy of a woman who, knowing herself without adequate weapons, withdraws from a combat that has proved fruitless, or it might imply the merely catlike desire to toy with a certainty. He looked quickly at the delicate face, the green eyes somewhat obliquely set, the unreliable mouth, and instantly he inclined to the latter theory. The conviction that she possessed the telegram filled him suddenly, and with it came the desire to put his belief to the test—to know beyond question whether her smiling unconcern meant malice or mere entertainment.

"When you first came into the room," he said quietly, "you said 'I thought it would be you.' Why did you say that?

Again she smiled—the smile that might be malicious or might be merely amused. "Oh," she answered at last, "I only meant that though I had been told Jack Chilcote wanted me, it wasn't Jack Chilcote I expected to see!"

After her statement there was a pause. Loder's position was difficult. Instinctively convinced that, strong in the possession of her proof, she was enjoying his tantalized discomfort, he yet craved the actual evidence that should set his suspicions to rest. Acting upon the desire, he made a new beginning.

"Do you know why I came?" he asked.

Lillian looked up innocently. "It's so hard to be certain of anything in this world," she said. "But one is always at liberty to guess."

Again he was perplexed. Her attitude was not quite the attitude of one who controls the game, and yet— He looked at her with a puzzled scrutiny. Women for him had always spelled the incomprehensible. He was at his best, his strongest, his surest, in the presence of men. Feeling his disadvantage, yet determined to gain his end, he made a last attempt.

"How did you amuse yourself at Grosvenor square this morning before Eve came to you?" he asked. The effort was awkwardly blunt, but it was direct.

Lillian was buttoning her glove. She did not raise her head as he spoke, but her fingers paused in their task. For a second she remained motionless; then she looked up slowly.

"Oh," she said sweetly, "so I was right in my guess? You did come to find out whether I sat in the morning room with my hands in my lap or wandered about in search of entertainment?"

Loder colored with annoyance and apprehension. Every look, every tone, of Lillian's was distasteful to him. No microscope could have revealed her more fully to him than did his own eyesight. But it was not the moment for personal antipathies; there were other interests than his own at stake. With new resolution he returned her glance.

"Then I must still ask my first question, Why did you say, 'I thought it would be you?'" His gaze was direct—so direct that it disconcerted her. She laughed a little uneasily.

"Because I knew."

"How did you know?"

"Because"— she began; then again she laughed. "Because," she added quickly, as if moved by a fresh impulse, "Jack Chilcote made it very obvious to any one who was in his morning room at 12 o'clock today that it would be you and not he who would be found filling his place this afternoon. It's all very well to talk about honor, but when one walks into an empty room and sees a telegram as long as a letter open on a bureau"—

But her sentence was never finished. Loder had heard what he came to hear. Any confession she might have to offer was of no moment in his eyes.

"My dear girl," he broke in brusquely, "don't trouble. I should make a most unsatisfactory father confessor." He spoke quickly. His color was still high, but not of annoyance. His suspense was transformed into unpleasant certainty, but the exchange left him surer of himself. His perplexity had dropped to a quiet sense of self reliance. His paramount desire was for solitude in which to prepare for the task that lay before him—the most congenial task the world possessed—the unraveling of Chilcote's tangled skeins. Looking into Lillian's eyes, he smiled. "Goodby," he said, holding out his hand. "I think we've finished—for today."

She slowly extended her fingers. Her expression and attitude were slightly puzzled — a puzzlement that was either spontaneous or singularly well assumed. As their hands touched she smiled again.

"Will you drop in at the Arcadian tonight?" she asked. "It's the dramatized version of 'Other Men's Shoes!' The temptation to make you see it was too irresistible—as you know."

There was a pause while she waited for his answer, her head inclined to one side, her green eyes gleaming.

Loder, conscious of her regard, hesitated for a moment. Then his face cleared. "Right!" he said slowly. "The Arcadian tonight!"

GET INSIDE.

Your Friends and Neighbors in Towanda Will Show You How.

Rubbing the back won't cure backache.

A liniment may relieve, but can't cure.

Backache comes from the inside—from the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills get inside—They cure sick kidneys.

Here is Towanda proof that this is so:

William Smith, employed at Towanda Toy factory, and living at 106 Kingsbury Ave., Towanda, Pa., says: "It is several years since I recommended Doan's Kidney Pills through Towanda papers. I procured them at H. C. Porter & Son's drug store on Main street. They cured me of distressing pains in my back and through my sides, particularly severe in the morning and it took me some time before I could get around with any degree of ease. It was never severe enough to lay me up and keep me away from my work, but was sufficient to cause me more annoyance than anyone should endure when Doan's Kidney Pills can so easily be procured. If I had not received positive relief in 1896 I would have been the last person in Towanda to publicly endorse this preparation and if the results had not been permanent nothing coould now induce me to re-endorse the remedy. I not only speak for myself but for my mother who has also used them for backache and they have never failed to promptly relieve her."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Lost and Found.

Lost, between 9:30 p. m., yesterday and noon today, a billious attack, with nausea and sick-headache. This loss was occasioned by finding at Turner's Drug Store a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills, the guaranteed cure for billiousness, malaria and jaundice. 25c.

A two-year-old colt that will weigh 1,500 pounds and is well and sound is a pretty good looking proposition from the view of the fellow who has him for sale.

There is good and easy money in horses when they will fetch 8 cents a pound at three years old. At prices prevailing now they are bringing from 12 to 16 cents.

While doctors are generally recognized as a necessity, there is no medicine they can give that equals in beneficent results those obtained from exercise, fresh air and temperate living.

The practical argument to be urged against boards of trade or other forms of speculating is that, as a rule, a fellow is never satisfied until he gets it in the neck a-plenty and loses all his property.

The time to prepare data for one's obituary write-up is the interval of forty or fifty years before the copy is handed to the printer. Where this is neglected it makes a bad job all around.

The average age of some of the familiar animals is given by one authority as follows: Squirrel, 7 years; rabbit, 7; swine, 20; stag, 50; horse, 30; ass, 30; sheep, 10; cow, 20; eagle, 100, and goose, 80 years.

If the country boy could realize the stand up collar, treadmill existence of a city clerk, who rides to work on a trolley, looks pleasant and breathes bad air all day, he would prize more than he does the blessings of freedom, sunshine and fresh air.

Arbitration between individuals is in every way as commendable and produces just as satisfactory results as when it is invoked to settle disputes between nations. It is conducive to neighborhood peace and good will and should be employed more than it is.

The privilege of having fruit and vegetables crisp and fresh is sufficient compensation for all the work involved in the maintenance of the home garden. Produced in this manner, the quality is not only the best, but one does not have to scrimp and economize in the quantity.

It is worth while remembering that trees as well as garden vegetables make the most satisfactory and vigorous growth when they are kept in a state of thorough cultivation. For the trees on the lawn this condition of soil may be approximated by spading up the sod and giving the tree a generous mulch of manure. This not only keeps the soil moist, but provides needed fertilizing elements as well.

The room where the seed corn is placed in test, provided the Holden or other similar method is used, should not be too warm—not above 70 degrees—as oftentimes seed that will make quite a presentable start under superheated test conditions will not sprout at all when placed in the cold ground. The only safe way is to discard all ears any kernels of which do not show decidedly vigorous germinating power.

Within certain limits and under similar conditions the yield of corn which a field will produce is in direct proportion to the number of stalks in the field. Careful attention paid to this one important point will do more than any other thing to raise the wretchedly low average yield of corn which is a standing disgrace to the agricultural interests of the country. The only way to better matters is to carefully test every ear which is intended for seed. The fellow who says he hasn't time to test his seed corn you can put down as either shiftless, lazy or careless, very likely all three.

Thousands of King road drags are being used this spring with splendid results in many of the north central states. Whether made of split logs or of oak plank and finished with a steel shoe, the results are the same. While a road should not be allowed to get so dry that hard clods have formed, it is equally bad to go on to it with the drag when it is too wet. The mealy stage is the best, when the dragging of an ordinary harrow over it would reduce it to the maximum condition of mellowness. While there is some difference with different soil, it is safe to follow this direction as a general thing.

Friends of the forest preservation plans of the present administration will rejoice over the fact that President Roosevelt has within the past few weeks withdrawn from entry 190,000,000 acres of land in the western states, this because of the passage of a bill by congress making future withdrawal of land from private entry contingent upon the passage of legislation to that effect by congress. Thus the president has headed off the plans of a gang of timber, grazing and mining thieves whose maw is as insatiable as their ways are tricky and dishonest and who would sacrifice their fellows, their honor or their country for private greed.

A DISASTROUS EXPERIMENT.

Not all experiments conducted in the name of science and for the benefit of humanity have had a fortunate outcome. A notable illustration of this fact is the curse of the gypsy moth, specimens of which were brought to this country in 1869 by Professor Trouvelot of Harvard university in a series of experiments which he was conducting with a view to discovering some wild silkworms which might prove a commercial importance. Unluckily a heavy wind blew the covering from the tree in which these moths were feeding, and they were scattered. While a number of them were destroyed, enough escaped to propagate an army of the moths that the New England states have expended hundreds of thousands of dollars to exterminate.

A kitchen stove that goes to pieces within four years from the date of its purchase is a swindle at any price.

Nine times out of ten lack of sympathy is just another name for lack of imagination—ability to put oneself in another's place.

Spring plowing leaves the ground looser and makes it warmer than when it is plowed in the fall and merely disked before planting, the effect being quite noticeable in crops that are grown under the two conditions.

The most tender and crisp as well as the mildest onions we have ever raised for spring table use came from good sized old onions set in the ground about four inches deep as soon as it was in fit condition. They are in every way superior to those raised from little sets or black seed.

While the vegetarian folk and the no breakfasters may have reason on their side some of the time, it is, after all, pretty hard to beat a good slab of medium rare roast beef when a fellow has any real work to do. Potato salad, boiled cabbage and angel's food are all right now and then, but they don't amount to much when it comes to producing good red blood.

There is probably no worse breeder of disease and contamination about the premises than a damp cellar, containing mayhap stagnant water, with its likely accompaniment of stale and decaying vegetables. It is often overlooked because it is out of sight, but the germs and bacteria get in their work just the same. Clean the cellar out thoroughly if the above conditions prevail, whitewash the walls and scatter lime on the floor.

Reports are to the effect that central Illinois farmers are having trouble with the rotting of their corn. Both the yield and quality of last year's crop were good and the corn well matured, but for some reason not yet discovered or stated the crop is not keeping in good shape, and much of it is now unsound. Weather conditions prevailing during the early winter months are thought to have some bearing on the situation.

A great corn carnival is to be held in Chicago next October, the biggest thing of its kind ever attempted. One hundred thousand dollars in prizes will be distributed, one-half of which amount has already been raised as a guarantee fund among the business men and railroads of the city. There is not a bright boy in any home in the corn belt but will have an equal chance at some of the prizes offered, provided he is willing to get the best of seed and give it proper care.

Australia's chief industry is sheep raising, and in this particular she ranks second among the sheep raising countries. Argentina is first with 92,000,000 sheep, Australia follows with 72,000,000, while Russia is credited with 70,000,000. Twelve years ago Australia was credited with 106,260,000 head, but prolonged droughts have greatly reduced these figures. Sheep were not indigenous to Australia, but were introduced in 1797 and were of the Spanish merino species.

Directly contrary to a view quite generally held, it is not exposure to cold fresh air, but confinement in stuffy, overheated, underventilated houses, that is more than anything else responsible for the prevalence of colds and catarrhal troubles throughout all the northern states. People whose occupations keep them for the most part out of doors and those who are sane enough to appreciate the benefits of fresh air in the home are troubled little, if at all, by these complaints.

Contrary to the natural tendency in such cases, the time to raise horses most extensively is during years when the lowest prices prevail, and the time to grow potatoes and onions is in seasons just following those when they have been cheap as dirt. You can count on a majority of fellows following their natural inclination in these matters and ceasing to raise horses because they are cheap or not planting potatoes or onions because during the year preceding they have hardly paid the cost of production. In these cases it is best to vary a little from the course followed by most of your neighbors.

There are two things finer and of inestimably more value than the finest ears of corn, prize winning horses, cattle and sheep, and they are the intelligent, well bred and responsive boy and girl that are advancing to maturity in so many homes of the land. They may not in the earlier years help to pad a fellow's pocketbook or swell his bank account, but if those in whose keeping they have been placed have the thought in mind that they are to be some day prize winners there is bound to be a return to the parent in after years of comfort, consolation and recompense that mere sordid cash has not the capacity to measure. Thoroughbred, prize winning boys and girls—there is an ever increasing demand for them which will never be surfeited.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Five Gored Skirt Designed by May Manton—No. 5617.

LENGTHENED BY TWO FLOUNCES AND PERFORATED FOR WALKING LENGTH.

The skirt made with a gathered flounce is always a graceful one and is just now greatly in style, while it suits all the fashionable soft materials. Here is one that is gored at the upper portion and that shows two flounces, joined one to the other, which give a distinctly novel effect. The material is one of the pretty new foulards in shades of brown and white, but every seasonable material is appropriate, the model being equally well suited to washable materials and to those of silk, wool and the various mixtures.

The skirt portion is cut in five gores, and each of the flounces is gathered to form a heading. The two are then joined, and the upper is then joined to the lower edge of the skirt. The skirt itself is plain at the front, but gathered at the sides and back, and when liked it can be cut off in walking length.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 9 yards 27, 6½ yards 36 or 5 yards 44 inches wide.

Sizes for a 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inch waist.

5617 Five Gored Skirt, 22 to 30 waist.

Union Lodge No. 108 Celebrated Its Hundredth Anniversary

THE GRAND LODGE VISITORS.

Banquet Held in Mercur Hall to Which 300 Masons Sat Down—Notable Occasion Among the Fraternity—Souvenirs Given.

Honored by the presence of the Right Worshipful Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, George W. Kendricks, Jr., and distinguished members of the fraternity, Union Lodge, No. 108, F. and A. M., Wednesday celebrated the 100th anniversary of its institution. Members of the craft from far and near came to participate in the happy occasion; old members renewed the associations of former days and the whole occasion was crowned by a banquet in Mercur hall at which nearly 300 brethren sat down.

The program of the day included a commemorative session of the lodge at 2 o'clock, and a session at 4 o'clock at which the grand lodge visitors were received with grand lodge honors. At 5:30 a reception was given the grand officers in the lodge rooms. Lunch was served in the banquet hall after the first lodge meeting, and again at 6 o'clock following the reception.

The afternoon session of the lodge was the most interesting and enjoyable, especially to the older members. There were reunions of old friends and brief addresses by the Grand Lodge officers. The notable feature of the afternoon session was the historical address of Hon. James H. Codding. Ie was replete with the events and incidents of the early history of the lodge. He was then followed by Major Gore of Rural Amity Lodge of Athens, Col. John A. Codding, Dr. William T. Bishop of Harrisburg, and ex-Lieutenant Governor Davies, who was at his best. His speech and that of Col. Codding were eloquent tributes to the many illustrous dead, former members of Union Lodge, whose memories are still held in grateful remembrance by their successors.

HON. JAMES H. CODDING.

Distinguished Visitors.

The grand master was accompanied to Towanda by Rev. Charles H. Bond, the grand chaplain of the grand lodge; William B. Joslyn, instructor of the grand lodge school; Samuel W. Wray, private secretary to the grand master, and J. Henry Williams, past grand high priest of the grand chapter, and Rev. William B. Chalfant, acting senior grand warden. The party arrived from Philadelphia on train No. 1, and were met by a reception committee and escorted to the Ward House.

The success of the affair is not only due to the untiring efforts of the committees in charge, but all members of No. 108 were interested and lent their aid freely. The committee of arrangements was made up as follows: James H. Codding, chairman; John W. Codding, secretary; Charles L. Tracy, treasurer; John N. Califf, Lester R. Frost, Mahlon M. Spalding, Edward Carter, Jr., Francis C. Overton, John C. Ingham and T. Morris Cuddy.

Members and visitors registered in the reception room at the foot of the stairs leading to the lodge room, and were then given a ticket of admission to the banquet and souvenir medal. The souvenir given to members was of sterling silver oxidized, and that to the visitors of bronze. Each bore the same inscriptions—on one side the square and compass, with the title and location of the lodge, and on the other the dates 1807-1907 and clasped hands.

The Young Ladies' society of Christ Church served the banquet, and Mercur hall never presented a more attractive scene than when shortly after 7:30 the company sat down to the discussion of the menu, which was followed by the toasts and songs and the good cheer that properly mark the reunion of old friends and brothers.

Four tables were arranged almost at the head of the hall where were seated the grand lodge officers, the officers of Union Lodge and prominent visitors. The tables were beautifully laid, adorned with carnations and smilax, and sparkling with silver, cut glass and candelbra. Each table was under the supervision of one lady, and 40 ladies of the society served

The Social Session.

After the lighting of the cigars John C. Ingham, Esq., who acted as toastmaster, called the assemblage to order and introduced Worshipful Grand Master Kendricks, who spoke upon "The Grand Lodge." He was followed by Hon. James H. Codding, who told of "Our Future" in happy and optimistic words. "Rural Amity, No. 70," was responded to by Joseph W. Beaman, Esq., of Athens. The toast "Our Ancient and Honorable Fraternity," was also committed to capable hands in the person of Rev. Edwin A. Gernant. The last on the program, but not least in the hearts of the brethren was "The Mason's Wife," and her virtues and graces lost none of their charm as they were described by Dr. C. Manville Pratt. Then there were beside some cases of "Spontaneous Combustion."

Oppenheim's Wilkes-Barre orchestra was stationed upon the stage behind a bank of palms and ferns and gave a delightful program during the evening. A pleasant feature of the evening was the singing of the following songs, two of which will be recognized as original compositions, although anonymous:

Masonry.

Air—"America."

Hail, Masonry divine!
Glory of ages, shine,
Long may'st thou reign:
Wher'r thy Lodges stand,
May they have great command,
And always grace the land,
Thou art divine!

Great fabrics still arise,
And grace the azure skies,
Great are thy schemes;
Thy noble orders are
Matchless beyond compare;
No art with thee can share,
Thou art divine!

Hiram the Architect,
Did all the Craft direct
How they should build;
Solomon, great Israel's king;
Did mighty blessings bring,
And left us room to sing
Hail, Royal Art!

Apples—Chestnuts.

Air—"In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree."

In the shade of the Old Court House tree
Where the tipstaves doze on drowsilee
While the sparrows they twit,
And make many a hit
Then sail away up in great glee;
I could hear the dull groan of the folks
When they heard that Judge Fanning's jokes
With a point that is true
Had bid an adieu
To the secretry because it provokes.

In the shade of the old chestnut tree
Where we cook up the stories that we Shall spring on our friends,
Who must laugh at their ends
And then try to act natural-ee;
The speaker to-night here regales
The boys with these chestnutty tales
You must smile if you can
He's such a nice man
His stories might pass through the mails

In the Hundred Years of Time.

Air—"In the Good Old Summer Time."

(1)

There's a place that is dear,
Unto Each Mason here,
Good Old Union Lodge.
Where in faith we come greeting
Each other here meeting,
Good Old Union Lodge.
The hundred years over,
We welcome each rover,
From every Fraternal clime.
The Mason with pleasure,
Will rejoice without measure,
In the hundred years of time.

CHORUS.

In the hundred years of time,
In the hundred years of time,
Meeting after many days
Passed in every clime.
You grasp our hands and we clasp yours,
And then we sing this rhyme,
To commemorate all Masons,
In the hundred years of time.

(2)

Our Fraternity here,
Greets brother dear,
Good Old Union Lodge,
Where to Heaven she raises,
Her paeans of praises,
Good Old Union Lodge.
Her glad voices are singing,
"Peace with you," goes ringing,
Let the bells a warm welcome chime,
Think not of to-morrow,
But banish all sorrow,
In the hundred years of time.

CHORUS.

In the hundred years, etc.

Auld Lang Syne.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And never brought to mind?
Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And days of auld lang syne?
For auld lang syne, my dear,
For auld lang syne;
We'll tak' a cup o' kindness yet
For auld lang syne.

And here's a hand, my trusty friend'
And gie's a hand o' thine;
We'll tak' a cup o' kindness yet,
For auld lang syne.

Union Lodge History.

Such facts as are here given are taken from the most complete and accurate history of Union Lodge compiled by Hon. James H. Codding and published in 1899. The first meeting of Union Lodge, No. 108, F. and A. M., was held on April 3, 1807, in the afternoon, at the house of Brother Amos Mix at Wysox. The brethren present were Oratio Grant, W. M.; Amos Mix, S. W.; Ebenezer Tuttle, J. W.; Joseph Grant, treasurer; George Scott, secretary; William Myer, steward; Cyprian Grant, S. D.; William B. Whitney, J. D.; William B. Foster, tyler. Ten visitors were also present and witnessed the institution of the lodge. At this time and place Union Lodge, No. 108, was constituted and the warrant delivered by Brother Joseph Kingsbury, Worshipful Master of No. 70. He was accompanied by Thomas Overton and Samuel Satterlee, both past masters and the latter secretary of No. 70.

Wysox then embraced what is now Towanda and the new lodge was to meet alternately in Wysox and Orwell. The lodge still meets within the confines of old Wysox, and at no period since its first year were the meetings held alternately. At the second meeting, which was held April 23, candidates were proposed, the first member to be initiated was Alphus Choate, on May 31, 1807. Ten meetings were held that year, the hour being in the afternoon. Since 1844 the meetings have been held in the evening.

The first permanent home of the lodge was in the house of Brother William Myer in Wysox, the building yet standing on the East side of the road at Myersburg. The lodge room was located in the upper story at the West end of the building. The first years of Union Lodge were marked by harmony and growth, the membership then numbering 21; at the close of the next year it had 27 members.

Through the troublesome Masonic times of 1826 and the ten years following Union Lodge was quiescent, but its members remained true, and in 1839 its work was revived and from that day to this has never ceased to steadily grow. In that year it was voted to meet next at "some convenient place in Towanda," and alternately in Wysox. This was never carried out, and never but once since has Union Lodge met outside of Towanda borough. That occasion was on May 19, 1842, when the brethren met for the last time in its old home to pay funeral honors to their benefactor and brother, William Myer, who had died four days previously.

The "convenient place" in Towanda was until probably the Fall of 1844 in the old "Fireproof" county building, situated Northeast of the present court house, upon the site and the rear of the present Franklin Engine house. April 10, 1844, the third story of the brick building at the corner of Main and Pine streets, was leased; in 1848 or 1849 the lodge moved to the Kingsbury block on the East side of Main street to the hall now occupied by the I. O. O. F., and for several years the two bodies used it in common.

May 14, 1856, a contract was made for the purchase of the third floor of the brick building on the West side of Main street, now occupied by Dittrich's grocery, C. L. Felton and others, and for 31 years it was the home of Union Lodge. It is still owned and used by the Masonic bodies. In 1887, on the erection of the brick block at the corner of Main and Pine streets by William Chamberlin, the third floor was leased for a term of 25 years. The first meeting held there was on March 7, 1888, William F. Dittrich being Worshipful Master. The present quarters are among the best appointed and most convenient enjoyed by the fraternity in this section of the state, combining every necessity and convenience.

How Jim Crow Got His Cognomen.

When James Crow, the Italian whom the police have been interviewing of late in regard to stolen Lehigh freight was christened in Sunny Italy he was given a regulation Italian name, his present title acquired by virtue of his experience as an amateur nimrod. When he first came over he went out one sunny day and captured a black partridge with a long black bill, Jim supposing all American birds were eatable stripped the bird of its black feathers and after cooking it the regulation time proceeded to sample its flesh. He pronounced it "nogoody, tuffy like leather." Other Italians who were present immediately christened him Jim Crow, the name he has borne since.

For the Children

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. Correct any constipation by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar-coated.

THE LATE E. M. BISHOP.

Sketch of Native of This County Who Died in Boston.

The Universalist Leader, a religious periodical published in Boston, gives the following account of the death of E. M. Bishop, a native of Bradford county, who died suddenly while attending services in the Universalist church in that city:

"On Sunday morning, the 3rd of March, just as the service had commenced in the Second Universalist church, Boston, Mr. Bishop fell in the aisle as he stepped toward his pew and almost immediately expired. He had been speaking with several of the church people but a moment before and appeared unusually cheery and well.

"He is the third member of the board of directors of this church to die during the year, deacons Jack and Parks succeedmg him. They were all devoted, consecrated men and their loss to the church is very heavy.

"Deacon Bishop was born in Asylum township, Bradford county, Pa., in 1830 and was trained in the Presbyterian faith. But his sympathies and investigations led him to embrace 'the faith once declined to the saints,' a faith which he cherished with ardor and increasing satisfaction to his dying day.

"He took up his residence in Boston in 1886 and with his family soon became identified with the Second Society. From that time to the day of his death he was rarely for a Sunday absent from his pew. One of the most intelligent and appreciative listeners, helpful always in his advice and ready with a strong hand to forward the work of the church, he speedily became one of the most valuable members of the parish. For many years he was on the standing committee, remaining till his death, for a considerable period superintendent of the Sunday school, and also a teacher of the Bible class. Dr. Bishop was a careful thinker and emphatic in his convictions, but he was catholic in spirit, fair in thought and a helper instead of a hinderer in Zion.

"He was a practical metaphysician by profession and his students and patients came from all parts of the country, many of them notable people. Beneficient and humanitarian by nature, thousands were helped by him without money or price.

"A conscientious, able, consecrated brother, faithful, brave and efficient, has passed the Great Divide. Grant that something of his fidelity, and courage and faith may remain in the lives of those he leaves behind.

"Funeral services were held in the church on Tuesday, March 5, at 2 p. m., his pastor, Rev. Dr. Roblin, having charge and pronouncing the eulogy. He leaves his wife and two children, John Bishop and Mrs. W. H. Cook, of Boston and Brookline."

Improving Roads.

Carrier Comfort reports good work being done on the roads in West Burlington by the use of split log drags—a simple, home-made contrivance designed especially to fill the ruts and holes in the roads at this time of the year. Two thus far have been used made respectively by Bert Rockwell and Edward Dickinson. Split log drags are strongly recommended in the R. F. D. News and the experience with them in West Burlington justifies fully all that has been said in their favor.—Troy Gazette Register.
